Queen to Meet Duchess of Windsor

Silence of 29 Years to End at Duke's Bedside

By CAROL KENNEDY
LONDON (CP)—The Queen plans to meet the Duchess of Windsor for the first time as a result of the Duke's eye operation, thus breaking a 29-year silence between the British royal court and former American divorcee Wallis Simpson.

for whom King Edward VIII gave up his throne in 1936.
The Queen was to have visited her ailing uncle today at the London Clinic, but a third major operation on his left eye performed Wednesday made it impossible for him to receive visitors.

"This is not a casual meeting," a spokesman for Buckingham Palace said. "It has been arranged that when the Queen goes to visit the Duke, the Duchess will be with him."
The date of the meeting has not been fixed, but it is expected within the next few days when the 70-year-old former king's doctors decide he is well enough.

The Queen has met the Duke on several private occasions at Buckingham Palace since her accession in 1952, but a post-abdication decree barring the Duchess from any right to the title "royal highness" has prevented any official rapprochement between the Duke's wife and the royal family.

After the Windsor's marriage in June, 1937, the Duchess described the feeling of restraint as "the coldness which had set-

Street Vigil in Selma

Night Ban Ignored

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—More than 350 Negroes and white clergymen marched from a church here Wednesday night and stood in the street singing and praying after police halted the procession.

No First Aid

SELMA (UPI)—Two doctors serving with civil rights groups said Wednesday they were taken to the Dallas county courthouse by state troopers and ordered not to give first aid to people hurt in racial demonstrations.

Another Trek Across U.S.?

Nasser Warns West Germany

Stop Deal with Israel Or Lose All Arab Ties

CAIRO (AP)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser said Wednesday Egypt will recognize Communist East Germany and freeze West German funds if Bonn establishes diplomatic relations with Israel.

Nasser warned Bonn that 12 other member states of the Arab League would sever economic and diplomatic relations with West Germany if it recognizes Israel.

In Egypt itself, he said, the government would seize West German schools as a further retaliatory measure.

"West Germany is unveiled now as an imperialist power and we must punish all imperialist powers," Nasser told a mass rally.

Nasser was accompanied by Cuba's minister of industry, Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

ARAB STATES VOTED
Nasser confirmed earlier reports that representatives of 13 Arab states had voted to sever economic and diplomatic relations with Bonn if it recognizes Israel, and to withdraw their ambassadors from West Germany immediately.

This vote has yet to be approved by Arab foreign ministers meeting in Cairo Sunday.

"WE WILL SEE"
"Thirty per cent of West Germany's trade is with the Arab world," Nasser said. "We will see who will be pulling whose ear."

In Bonn, the development aid minister, Walter Scheel, said West Germany is not stopping all economic aid to Egypt.

ANOTHER LOAN
Scheel told the Foreign Press Association that the present aid program will be carried out and the United Arab Republic will get another 100,000,000 marks ($25,000,000) in easy term loans.

The minister explained that economic retaliation against President Nasser will consist in not entering into new aid agreements with him.

$20,000,000 Development In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia government plans a $20,000,000 development in a two-block area downtown that possibly includes a 20-story office building, reports here indicate.

The block is bounded by Georgia, Howe, Smith and Hornby Streets. One contains the provincially-owned court house and the other was purchased by the government for $1,800,000 last year.

Wild night of crises worst

since pipeline TENSE HOUSE BOILS

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons, for a brief spell silenced and apparently ashamed by its own actions, erupted in another wild performance late Wednesday in the pension plan debate, again pushing legislators to the brink of an election.

The earlier crisis was as tense as any moment in the Commons since the rancorous and riotous pipeline debate of 1956, from which flowed the discrediting of Louis-Rene Beaudoin as speaker of the Commons and, in the opinion of many political observers, the defeat of the former Liberal government under Louis St. Laurent.

This time, it was Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Justice Minister Faureau who squared off against each other on the question of justice department administration. While neither side withdrew an inch, they agreed the impasse had become so vital to the existence of the parliamentary institution in Canada that they would call it a draw.

IMPROPER ANSWER

Mr. Diefenbaker complained that Mr. Faureau had not answered a written question properly. He asked whether the government was going to use a rule saying opposition members cannot complain about the answers they get, a government can give any information "which is obviously false."

CHALLENGES HOUSE

Speaker Alan Macnaughton asked Mr. Diefenbaker to withdraw the implication the justice minister gave the Commons false information. Mr. Diefenbaker refused, in effect challenging the government to move for his expulsion from the House.

A tense moment of silence ensued.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), speaker of the House during the last session of the former Conservative government, said he had become disturbed at the extent to which parliamentary language had deteriorated. Members had been calling each other liars, words not admitted to parliamentary usage a year ago.

Prime Minister Pearson entered the debate to agree in principle with the former speaker and say the House should get on with its business "with less disruption." Mr. Diefenbaker noted he hadn't complained about Mr. Faureau's remark about "minimum of decency." Mr. Faureau maintained what he had said had not been false, but true.

SULLEN REGRET

The Commons then went on in an atmosphere of sullen regret at its own performance.

But before the short 3 1/2-hour Wednesday sitting was done, another melee of shouted exchanges occurred in the pension debate.

The Conservatives supported

QUEBEC (CP)—Frank Hanley, lone independent member, spoke out against democratic government Wednesday.
Speaking during debate on a bill giving teachers the qualified right to strike, he said he would prefer a moderate dictatorship with good leadership to the current "stupid" democratic system.

Viet Nam Reprisal

Buddhists Burn Catholic Homes

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (AP)—Revived religious friction brought arson and gunfire Wednesday to Da Nang, the site of a strategic air base newly reinforced by 3,500 U.S. marines.

Buddhist youths burned the homes of four Roman Catholics in reprisal for the fatal stabbing of a Buddhist soldier by a Catholic soldier in a card game Sunday.

South Vietnamese rangers fired into the air to break up a crowd of Buddhist demonstrators shouting anti-Catholic slogans. They arrested 16 persons. No Americans were involved.

RED AGITATORS

Ill-feeling between South Vietnamese Buddhists and Catholics is of long standing in this area and speculation was strong that Communist Viet Cong agitators were trying to take advantage of it.

As the U.S. marines expanded their holdings in this area 90 miles south of the North Vietnamese border, U.S. Air Force fighter-bombers staged another raid, apparently against Communist bases and supply lines in eastern Laos territory held by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao. As in such raids in the past, the F-100 and F-105 jets returned here without fanfare or official comment.

Minor attacks were staged early Wednesday on several government installations within five miles of Saigon. In one the guerrillas over-ran an outpost assigned to protect a suburban textile plant, but did not attack the plant itself. Three of the outpost's defenders were missing.

In Saigon, a ranking U.S. military spokesman said U.S. jets have not proved spectacularly effective in attacking the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam, but "over the long pull they will be useful." The jets were unleashed Feb. 13 to supplement the work of U.S.-South Vietnamese helicopters and propeller-driven planes.

Russia Avoids Direct Clash

Authoritative diplomatic reports in London say Russia apparently is holding back promised major arms supplies to Communist North Viet Nam.

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. may give up suspending drivers' licences for motor vehicle infractions.
The practice has been unsuccessful in keeping offending motorists off the roads, and other solutions will have

Motor vehicles superintendent Ray Hatfield said one answer could be compulsory driver training before licences are issued. He said studies

Coroner Glen McDonald of Vancouver said something should be done about ruling drivers off the road unless they keep their minds on what they're doing.

Scots Bank Notes Illegal!

LONDON (Reuters) — Scotsmen got shattering news in the House of Commons Tuesday — the 20-plus different kinds of bank notes issued by Scottish banks are not legal tender in Britain, though they are fairly generally accepted.

When Niall MacDermot, financial secretary to the treasury announced this, Dr. M. S. W. Miller, a Labor member of Parliament from Glasgow, said the disclosure might provoke a rebellion in Scotland greater than that in 1745 aimed at putting Bonnie Prince Charlie on the throne. Another MP, J. A. Stodart, a Conservative from Edinburgh, said recently he accepted a guinea (21 shillings) for a Scottish £1 note. An English £1 note has 20 shillings.

He asked MacDermot to "encourage this tendency." MacDermot said there would be difficulties in making Scottish bank notes legal tender throughout Britain, adding that he would like to hear of any Scotsman refusing one.

A Mansion For Sale

LONDON (CP) — The Mayfair home of Toronto-born, described as one of the most splendid private houses in London, was offered for sale Wednesday for £35,000 ($225,000).

The house has two elevators, a big roof garden including a lawn, summerhouse and fountain, four living rooms, eight bedrooms and four bathrooms.

$1,000,000 Art Find

VANCOUVER (CP) — A painting by 16th-century artist Andrea del Sarto, uncovered by Vancouver antique store owner Carl Rose and which could be worth up to $1,000,000, will be taken to Italy next month for restoration.

The painting had been re-touched by someone who considered del Sarto's work too drab.

Doctors Reply:

'Our Demands Exaggerated'

LONDON (CP) — The British Medical Association accused Health Minister Kenneth Robinson Wednesday night of greatly exaggerating doctors' salary demands when he said they would amount to 60 per cent.

This new clash set the stage for today's second round of talks between the minister and the BMA, representing Britain's 23,000 family doctors.

Robinson said new pay proposals would, if accepted, result in an average net income of £4,500 ($14,400) a year for the doctors but the BMA later described this as "a tendentious and inaccurate" estimate.

HALF CLAIMED

"In our view the family doctor with an average list would only be assured of about half what the minister has estimated," the BMA said in a statement.

At the same time the Labor government minister warned that only the threatened mass resignations by doctors from the national health service could "trustee" the government's willingness to negotiate a new contract.

STATES INCREASE

Analyzing a "doctors' charter" presented by the BMA Monday, Robinson said it would mean an increase in the average net income of a family doctor of a further £1,200 ($3,600) a year, in addition to the 50 per cent increase recommended by an independent review body last month.

Robinson held "amicable" opening discussions with BMA leaders Wednesday.

CLC Asks Tax Cuts, Higher Spending

OTTAWA (CP) — A 250-member delegation from the Canadian Labor Congress called on the government Wednesday to reduce personal income taxes, boost federal spending and continue deficit budget-making to keep the current economic upswing in motion.

Prime Minister Pearson said he agrees with the need for strong expansionary measures but appeared to question the CLC's opposition to a balanced budget when he said:

DIFFICULT TO DO

"Perhaps you're right. But if you can't secure a balanced budget in a time of expansion, it certainly will be difficult to do it at other times."

Labor Minister MacEachen assured the delegation the government is continuing its efforts to reduce unemployment. He said there has been a steady improvement in the situation during the last year, with the January jobless rate down to 4.3 per cent of the labor force on the seasonally adjusted figure.

LISTS NEW PROGRAMS

He said other programs are being developed to cope with manpower problems, notably a new national plan to assist in the movement of workers. Details of the plan were not announced.

Claude Jodoin, president of the 1,180,000-member congress, took one hour and 15 minutes to read the CLC's 12,500-word annual brief to the cabinet.

STEEL INQUIRY URGED

But a Gesture

IN AN UNPRECEDENTED move designed ostensibly to restrict the distribution of hate literature in this country the federal government has permanently barred an American organization which specializes in this unwholesome activity from the privilege of using Canadian mails.

However, though this cancellation order now imposed against the National States Rights Party of Birmingham, Alabama, might well appear worthy of the commendation of all Canadian citizens who abhor the evils of racialism, it should be clearly understood that the ban is little more than a public gesture of disapproval on the part of the Ottawa administration.

From a practical point of view the action accomplishes little—and for this all who believe in the fundamental democratic freedoms should be thankful, for if the Ottawa order had teeth in it Canadian mails would now be subject to censorship by postal authorities.

As the situation now stands Canadian mails still remain inviolate as ever they were with the exception that any mail addressed to or recognized as coming from the Alabama National States Rights Party will be removed from the post and returned to the sender or retained by the Post Office.

The ban can thus be easily overcome by the offending group simply through distributing its literature here in plain envelopes. And even though it is inevitable that such a course will be followed by this anti-Semitic and anti-Negro organization it is to be hoped that the government will not be persuaded to further widen its restrictions in this area.

Canadians, whether or not they feel strongly about this matter, should recognize that any move towards the censorship of our mails, no matter how well intended it may be, is a dangerous threat to our basic freedoms as guaranteed by the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Going Too Far

THERE IS MUCH to be said—and it has been said hundreds if not thousands of times on public platforms, in council chambers, in the legislature and in the press, to unresponsive government ears—in favor of the relief of property-owners from more of the burdens of school taxation.

The case for a more equitable sharing of education costs between the provincial treasury and the local ratepayers remains strong though its proponents have for years been unsuccessful in their attempts to persuade Premier Bennett and his cabinet to their view.

But it can only be weakened if carried to an unsupportable extreme. Liberal leader Ray Perrault risks a loss of sympathy when he rides the argument too hard and too far, as he surely does when he asserts that school boards should not be required to contribute anything toward the capital costs of the new vocational additions to secondary schools; that these should be financed entirely (apart from the federal grants) by the provincial government because the community taxpayers cannot afford a share of this expense superimposed on the cost of normal growth of the education system.

The local portion of the construction and equipment outlay on vocational projects eligible for the federal grants will be only 10 per cent, it should be noted, which if not exactly inconsequential is certainly a small price to pay for educational amenities which will be assets of the communities in which they are located—no matter that they will also be assets of the province and the nation.

The finance policy adopted some years ago by the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, the chart for those who continue to maintain that property-owners should pay for services to property and that everyone should pay for services to people, called for provincial assumption of the whole operating cost of schools. But it conceded that in line with the measure of local control, because taxpayers can vote for or against bylaws to borrow money for school construction, capital expenditure entailing borrowing should be shared half-and-half by the provincial and local authorities.

This was and is a reasonable view, and by such a standard Mr. Perrault goes overboard in his protest against the relatively easy terms on which school districts will acquire the vocational training facilities.

A Faster Start

HATS OFF to Councillor James Byant of Esquimalt for putting some steam into the confederation centennial committee of Greater Victoria of which he recently was appointed chairman. By advancing the deadline for commemorative project suggestions by a month, from June 1 to May 1, he will have set minds more actively turning to the possibilities in addition to those that have already been put forward. And no less important, he will have provided an extra month in which, after the selection has been duly made and recommended by the committee, if this is to be the procedure, councils can debate it, join in undertaking it, or make their separate plans and finally accomplish whatever they set out to do individually or together in time for the centenary in 1967. The extra time allowance is the more beneficial because the summer months, the holiday season, often see not very much accomplished by the councils.

A score of ideas are already in, though some of them are duplications and some presumably would not take up more than a part of the $450,000 available if the whole region works as one in this respect. No doubt there will be more to come, and the committee will have a real job cut out for it looking into the probable costs and practicality of the suggestions. It is pleasing to see that Mr. Byant apparently intends that the body should approach this task with vigor.

Figuring Earnings

MR. KINDT: . . . There is another provision in this bill dealing with the determination of average lifetime earnings. I wonder how I would go about figuring out the lifetime earnings of the Minister of National Health and Revenue.

Miss LaMarch: Stick around.

Mr. Kindt: I am afraid I would have to stick around, and stick pretty close, for six months in order to dig into all her earnings here, there and in other places; that is, if the minister is a normal individual, and I assume that she is. I have always found her to be that way.

Miss LaMarch: I wish I could say the same for you.

Britain's New Approach

Government Aid for the Arts

By JOHN ARDAGH from London

THE British government has taken a big step towards bringing the arts under the umbrella of the welfare state. Britain has lagged behind many other countries in this field; now she seems to be trying to catch up.

It began last October, after the election. Mr. Harold Wilson, the prime minister, created a new government post. He put a junior minister in charge of leisure and the arts—not the full-scale minister of culture found in some countries, in France, for instance, with Andre Malraux, but at least a step in that direction. The person chosen for the job was Miss Jennie Lee, widow of the late Aneurin Bevan, daughter of a Scottish miner, now 60 years old but still very attractive. Unlike her French opposite number, she's no highbrow. But she is an ambitious and forceful politician, and seems determined to help put the arts on the official map.

As one of her main tasks will be to coax local town councils, often philistine or apathetic, into spending more local money on the arts, she might prove more effective than an egghead who would arouse suspicion or scorn.

She published a government White Paper. Though its proposals are often muddled and inadequate, they are better than none. They come after 13 years of rule by a Conservative government that seemed to show little concern for helping the arts. It is true that since the war an autonomous government agency called the Arts Council has received an annual treasury budget of £2 million to £3 million for subsidizing opera, music, drama and arts festivals, with small sums for painting and literature. But it has always had to fight a reluctant treasury to get its budget increased to meet rising costs.

The head of the Arts Council, Mr. Nigel Abercrombie, said to me: "Till now the arts in this country have been treated on a poor-law basis, only to be saved from collapse in extremis. We want them to be treated as a growth industry." This the White Paper tentatively begins to do. It recognizes that the state has a role to play now that the private Macnass is replaced by rich private industries or charity trusts like Ford and Gulbenkian, and now, too, that the growth of education is rapidly widening and potential audiences for good plays, music and so on.

The White Paper's most important innovation is a state building fund for rehousing the arts, to be operated by the Arts Council in addition to its ordinary budget. This is something that Britain badly needs. In London itself, the arts are on their way to being fairly well housed—the Festival Hall (for big concerts) has just been extended, money is earmarked for a national theatre and a new arts centre and there are plenty of well-run art galleries and theatres.

London is now the finest cultural centre in the world, with a range of activities better in some ways than Paris' and probably as good as New York's. But in the provinces, arts councils report four years ago described most of the art scene as "artistic slums, wholly unworthy of survival," and almost nothing has yet been done to correct this, with one or two shining exceptions. Draughty, ugly buildings, with bad acoustics, drab decor and hard seats, keep potential audiences away and glued instead to their TV screens.

Some local councils have plans for new buildings, or for renovating old ones. But it is expensive, and needs government encouragement. The new state central fund will be doled out to councils to help them pay for their own projects. It is only £250,000 for the first year, but this is at least a start, and will be an incentive. One councillor in a Lancashire town said to me: "Now that rehousing the arts is national policy, it will help us overcome the forces of apathy or opposition within our own ranks."

Already there has been one big success: Manchester city council, which has had a poor record of local arts patronage, has at last come forward with a multi-million-pound scheme for an arts centre in the middle of the city, with a new opera house, theatre and film centre. It is the most ambitious scheme of its kind ever seen in the British provinces, and just the sort that might expect to benefit from Miss Lee's new fund.

She also advocates more regional arts associations, the idea being that the councils of smaller towns club together to support the arts in their area. One has started in the northeast of England, an area with the reputation of being poor and backward. But it works well.

Miss Lee also wants to see multi-purpose arts centres springing up in most large towns, where several different arts would be housed under one roof. Malraux in France is building a chain of these, called Maisons de la Culture. Their aim is to provide what he calls an "interpenetration of the arts," so that the opera lover may pick up a taste for, say, sculpture, or the highbrow film fan for ballet or folk music.

A good idea, but it poses the question: where does "art" or "culture" end and mere "entertainment" begin? Malraux, being rather a highbrow, has his own answer. He wants to keep top Paris professional standards in his missions, and he does not like amateurs, and he wants to give his public a fairly rigorous diet. The British are more easy-going and less inclined to pedagogy than the French, and Miss Lee, exemplifying this, envisages arts centres that might even include jazz and variety and "pop" art, as well as amateur drama groups doing fairly simple plays.

There are two advantages over Malraux's plans in this approach. In a smallish town, it helps share the overheads of an arts centre, where there might not be a large enough potential audience for a more highbrow policy. Secondly, it may well "interpenetrate" the arts more effectively than Malraux's methods. Miss Lee wants these new centres to be warm, friendly, popular places, where ordinary, less-educated and less arty people won't be frightened away by the word "culture". Your lover of "pop" or, say, of handicrafts may find himself enticed to look at a modern art exhibition or an experimental play in the same building. But it will be important to maintain a sense of proportion, to make clear what "culture" means, and how it differs from "entertainment."

It is an argument that is often obscured in Britain, where "culture" can be a term of suspicion. And it is an old argument: Do you give people what they want, or what you think good for them? The British incline to the former. The pros and cons can be discussed endlessly. It is a philosophic or even moral dispute about the role of culture in society. But at least the first answer is to be pragmatic, as Miss Lee is now being: FIRST spend more money on helping and housing the arts properly, and THEN argue about what common people are appreciating the right things.

Ottawa Offbeat

Loaded in Quebec's Favor

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

THE Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism—or, the "B and B Boys," as they've become known across the country—are at it again, with a second round of hearings in Ottawa and more to come in Toronto and Montreal and who-knows-where-else before they're done.

In case you might have wondered how it was their interim report seemed a little lop-sided, just remember that the commission went to work in the first place with what clearly was a built-in bias.

The very personnel of the commission—their birth, background and even their facility with what are known now as "the two official languages"—makes it rather evident that this strangest-of-all federal investigations, from the outset, was loaded in favor of Quebec.

So it should come as no real surprise that in its first report the other day the commission spoke sternly to English Canada in the hard terms of "you must"—while speaking rather more softly to French Canada in such easy-does-it phrases as "you should."

And little wonder that the commission seems to coax or even plead with French Canada while lecturing, even directing and commanding English Canada.

Putting it quite plainly, the commission glorifies the attitudes and aspirations of Quebec as something almost sacred. What might be the commission's attitude to the hopes and fears, the ambitions and concerns of what Quebec likes to call "the other provinces" is difficult to discover. Indeed, if those "other provinces" have such aspirations, the commission might almost seem to regard them as inconsequential.

Possible explanation of the commission's seeming unconcern could be that five of those same "other provinces"—British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland—lack representation. Nobody speaks for them in assessing and dealing with what the Quebec-based commission rather sensationally calls the greatest crisis in Canadian history.

Even Ontario has only one English-speaking voice in the "B and B" chorus, and of Montreal birth and background, he sings a bilingual song.

Since the "B and B" commission was appointed and set to work to make Quebec happy, it perhaps should have been expected that it would be well weighted on the French-Canadian side.

But a "weighting" is one thing and a wild imbalance another. Right off the top, all commissioners had to be bilingual, and so this disqualified all but 3 per cent of English-speaking Canadians.

So who sits in for English Canada? Four people, three of them with Montreal and Quebec backgrounds. Co-chairman Davidson Dutton of Ottawa and Royce Frith of Toronto are both Montreal-born, and Frank Scott, now of Montreal, was born in Quebec City. The fourth English-Canadian representative, Mrs. Gertrude Laing now of Calgary, is British-born, getting the appointment for two basic reasons: (1) that she is a woman, and (2) represents the West while speaking fluent French.

Who speaks for French Canada? Three outspoken Quebec nationalists, leaders of the "Quiet Revolution," Andre Laurendeau, Jean Marchand and Jean-Louis Gagnon, all of Montreal, and Quebec-educated Rev. Clement Cormier of Moncton representing French-Canadians in the Atlantic provinces.

There are 10 commissioners, the remaining two being representatives of the ethnic groups, Jaroslav Rudnycky of Manitoba speaking for the Ukrainians and Paul Wyczaski of Ottawa for the Poles.

So, of the eight commissioners representing French and English Canada, seven have Montreal and Quebec backgrounds. This is balance? With nobody to say anything for English-Canadians on the West Coast, the Prairies except for Alberta, or the Maritimes?

Easy, then, to understand—although not necessarily agree or approve—why the commission has seemed to beam on Quebec, putting French Canada fondly on its own hand, while giving English Canada what was nothing less than another rap on its already well-rapped knuckles.

"We were lucky," grins Toronto MP Ralph Cowan wryly, "that the commission seems disposed to give us another chance to redeem ourselves with Quebec."

"When LBJ stops the outflow of dollars, I hope he tells us how it's done."

Lonely Voice

By MARQUIS CHILDS

THE witness had just concluded his testimony before the U.S. Senate foreign relations committee, speaking with the deliberation of one who weighs his words with the greatest care. In the momentary silence that followed Chairman J. William Fulbright said:

"I know of no one better qualified to comment on this than you are."

George F. Kennan had come out of his academic solitude at Princeton, where he is a professor at the Institute for Advanced Studies, to give his views on war and peace. Former chairman of the state department's policy planning staff, ambassador to the Soviet Union and later to Yugoslavia, author of definitive studies on Russia that have won every literary award, Kennan's qualifications could not be disputed.

In his appearance before the committee and in two preceding speeches Kennan had uttered a grave warning. By escalating the war in Viet Nam, Kennan was saying, the United States risks bringing Russia and China together again and facing the two nuclear giants almost alone. Asked by Sen. Stuart Symington (D., Mo.), a former secretary of the air force, what would be the reaction to American bombing of China, Kennan replied:

"... It is my feeling that in these circumstances they would feel themselves compelled to give military aid to China, probably short of getting in a nuclear exchange with us themselves. But in the process, I think, Soviet-American relations would be very seriously damaged for a long time to come."

"The problem we have over the next few years with the Chinese Communist regime is a tremendously serious one, very, very bitter and difficult, much greater than the problem with the Russians. If we are going to face successfully the solution of this problem with the Chinese I think we need all the help we can get and I think we need precisely something like a decent relationship with the Soviet Union."

"In other words, if we are going to cope successfully with the Chinese Communist regime we must opt if we can—it does not lie with us—to have one Communist adversary rather than two. It does not help us to force the Russians to come down on the Chinese side in the conflict against us."

It was no secret that privately several of the senators around the conference table were sympathetic to this view. But in the curious atmosphere prevailing in Washington, with pressures constantly growing to back President Johnson's moves in Viet Nam, little or no comment came from the senatorial side of the table. Similarly, knowledgeable specialists in the executive branch also agree that the greatest danger in Viet Nam may be uniting the two Communist powers. They, too, are silent, since high policy is to push the war in Viet Nam to a point at which the North Vietnamese will end their help for the Communist guerrillas and presumably end the conflict.

In a sense, then, Kennan is a unique figure. Others have questioned the administration's policy and at one extreme have denounced it. But they have done so without his broad range of experience and background.

This is not the first time he has spoken out when it might have been more discreet to be silent. In a series of lectures in London in 1957 he suggested the need for nuclear disarmament in Central Europe along the lines of the plan proposed by Poland's foreign minister, Adam Rapacki. The hard-liners came down on him with a savage attack.

In his address at the Paeon in Terris conference in New York, called to consider ways to implement Pope John XXIII's encyclical on peace, Kennan stressed the need to give serious consideration to proposals "looking to a restriction of the place of nuclear weapons in Europe's defenses." This would be one way to ease tensions and help build a working relationship with the Soviet Union. Behind this view is the assumption basic to the Kennedy administration's foreign policy in working out the nuclear test-ban treaty—that in a period of peace and prosperity the Communist powers will relax totalitarian controls and make peaceful coexistence a reality.

In his third utterance, a speech at Princeton University, Kennan dealt more directly with the Asian confrontation. He called for a reduction of American involvement in the Far East. The United States must come to terms in some way with the prevailing political forces on the Chinese mainland, he told his academic audience.

One consequence of the widening conflict in Viet Nam is a hardening of attitudes in the United States. Or, at any rate, those who do speak out for the most part express the view that the country must take any and all risks to subdue the Communist guerrillas in Viet Nam. It is difficult, therefore, for a more or less lonely voice like Kennan's to make itself heard.

Israeli Call-Up Causes Alarm

By LAWRENCE MOSHER, from Beirut, Lebanon

An Israeli activation of army reservists has added to Middle East fears that another major war between Israel and the Arab states is dangerously near.

A Radio Israel announcement termed the call-up a dry run to test the country's military preparedness, but a crisis atmosphere has been growing steadily over the last few weeks, heightened by these other developments:

● Israeli anger over the cancellation of the last 20 per cent of an $80,000,000 arms deal by West Germany.

● The sudden dispatch by President Johnson of special envoy Averell Harriman to Israel, reportedly to forestall any Israeli plans for a quick strike against the Arabs to persuade them to give up their Jordan River diversion schemes.

● Reports that the United Arab Republic has called up several thousand army reservists, possibly in connection with recent manoeuvres in the Gaza Strip, which is now closed to foreign visitors.

The background of the growing crisis is the Arab plan to divert part of the headwaters of the Jordan River, which Israel is now beginning to tap in order to raise the country's water table and irrigate her waterless Negev Desert.

The first diversion project is to be carried out by Lebanon. Although it only involves a relatively small spring called the Wazzani River, the Arab plan has made Lebanon the first test case of Israeli reaction.

Israel has now clearly stated that it is "ready to go to war" if her use of Jordan River waters is not below the 40 per cent allocated to her under the defunct plan suggested by the late U.S. envoy, Eric Johnston. The Arab diversion scheme, if fully implemented, would cut Israel's down to an estimated 20 per cent. It might also raise the salinity level.

According to one pro-UAR newspaper here, however, Israel will not wait until the Arab diversion schemes are completed before attacking.

In reporting on the Harriman visit to Israel, the paper said that Israel did not accept Harriman's plea to forego an armed attack in favor of taking the issue to the United Nations. The paper reported that Israel felt she had to demonstrate that she was able to dominate the situation.

In the past, however, Arab claims of an imminent Israeli attack have been used to smokescreen an Arab strike. Either way, the danger of a serious outbreak appears to be increasing at a rate which is alarming Western diplomats all over the Middle East.

BACKGROUND

Britain and Common Market

Hope Undimmed

By DOUG MARSHALL
From London

British ministers are quietly informing the six European Common Market countries Britain still hopes to be a passenger on the European boat, particularly now it is heading in the difficult waters of political union.

Michael Stewart, British foreign minister, told a meeting of the Western European Union in Rome yesterday Britain ultimately wants to join a European community provided her essential interests are safeguarded.

The WEU is made up of Britain and the six Common Market members — France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Stewart's statement, reaffirming what he said in Brussels last month, indicates no fundamental change in Britain's position on European entry.

In the last few months Britain's Labor government has been at pains to reassure the six it is neither as hostile nor as indifferent to European development as some Common Market leaders apparently believe.

When Labor, with its anti-European record in opposition, came to power last fall, French and West German diplomats argued this was a sign Britain had finally turned her back on Europe and it was time to move ahead without her.

The Europeans were particularly anxious to begin preliminary discussions on a political union. The issue had been shelved for two years, partly because of West German-French differences over the possible structure and partly because Belgium and The Netherlands refused to proceed without Britain taking part.

The January talks between de Gaulle and West Germany's Chancellor Erhard smoothed over the first difficulty and the French contended that, with Labor in power, waiting for Britain "is no longer a valid excuse."

However, Stewart stressed yesterday Britain wants to come in on the ground floor of any political talks. He warned it could damage both European and Atlantic unity if the six develop an exclusive political policy without consulting Britain and the other European Free Trade Association partners.

Headache Removed

Reds Send Water UP To Arid Hong Kong

By A. C. MILLER, from Hong Kong

For as long as anyone here cares to remember the lack of an adequate water supply has been a perennial Hong Kong headache. Now, due to an agreement between Communist China and the British authorities here, that headache is gone.

In accordance with an agreement signed in April last year, water has started flowing uphill from Red China's East River to reservoirs in Hong Kong.

The engineering accomplishment of moving water uphill was financed and devised by the Red Chinese.

The water scheme, known as the East River Project, involves nearly 52 miles of canals, dams, reservoirs, sluice gates and pumping stations. The estimated 18,000 Chinese who worked on the project completed it more than two months ahead of schedule.

Europeans who have viewed the project bring back reports of a remarkable engineering feat.

Hong Kong had the easy end of the work. The government here was responsible only for laying two 48-inch mains from the Red Chinese border to reservoirs within the colony's territory.

According to the agreement, Hong Kong will purchase a minimum of 15 billion gallons of water a year from China at a rate of about 20 cents per 1,000 gallons. Considering the huge amount of work put into the project and Hong Kong's need for water, the British authorities here consider the price quite cheap.

Following particularly dry years in the past, such as 1963, water often was available for only four hours every four days.

With the completion of the East River Project, that should not happen again in the immediate future, even during years of drought.

Red China had its own interest at heart in the project, too. For one thing, because the project is close to Hong Kong and directly involves this British colony it has received wide publicity.

The authorities in Peking supplied top engineers to design and build the water scheme as well as providing some of the best equipment China could manufacture. As a result, the project has been praised for its engineering soundness.

Then, of course, there is the $3,000,000 a year China will earn from selling water to Hong Kong.

There are other benefits for Red China. Surplus water will be diverted to irrigate several thousand acres of land. The dams and other works will help avert flood disasters. And, not to be forgotten is that if China ever decided to take control of Hong Kong, one thing it could do is turn off the water.

Finally, if that day comes when China does claim Hong Kong, it will already have solved that perennial headache—the water problem.

Above all these reasons, however, is one that is more immediate and fundamentally important to Peking. Hong Kong remains the most profitable and largest trade outlet for China. It is only good sense, from a businessman's point of view, to insure the continued well-being of a profitable investment.

Nazi Hunt Deadline Unlikely

BONN (Reuters)—Efforts in West Germany to extend the May 8 deadline for prosecuting Nazi war criminals appeared Tuesday night to have won the approval of the Bundestag.

The lower house of parliament voted by a show of hands to refer to a committee two motions to permit initiation of proceedings against accused war criminals after May 8.

Observers said the large majority indicated that the motions would almost certainly be ultimately approved by parliament.

The 20-year statute of limitations against accused Nazi war criminals could not be initiated—runs out May 8, dating from the 1945 surrender of the Third Reich.

The Bundestag vote came after seven hours of debate.

Heady 65 Sets Record

Wednesday went on record as the warmest March 10 in Victoria history.

Temperatures rose to 65.1 degrees in the 11th day of the current warm spell.

Previous record for March 10 was set in 1905, when the mercury rose to 63.2 degrees.

This is the warmest it has been since last fall, when temperatures reached 72 degrees on Oct. 7.

The heady weather of spring may have conked Victorians into thinking such weather will continue.

Well, the city is lucky. It will, said weatherman Bill Mackie, at least into Friday, and now it looks like a fine weekend.

"Things continue to look quite favorable," he says.

A large belt of high pressure lying along the coast and extending inland is causing storms over the Pacific to move straight north toward Alaska.

That's all right.

The boys flying their kites aren't objecting. The kiddies in the playgrounds aren't squawking. Gardeners, boaters, fishermen, sportsmen aren't complaining.

Mainly sunny with light winds and some high cloudiness is the forecast.

Already the city has equaled another spring record and

UBC Faculty Report Urges:

End Most Arts Course Exams

VANCOUVER (CP)—A University of British Columbia faculty committee recommended Wednesday that almost all examinations be eliminated from arts courses at the university.

The report advocates radical changes in the approach to arts education.

If implemented, the report would eliminate all Christmas examinations in the four-year arts course, and final examinations in the first three years.

Students would be promoted generally on the basis of participation in lectures and seminars, their written assignments and their willingness to work, rather than on academic achievements.

APPROVAL VITAL

Compulsory foreign language requirements would be removed and courses would be reorganized away from the present five-courses-a-year system.

The committee—headed by the late dean Kaspar Naegle—worked on the report for almost a year. The report was completed before Naegle died Feb. 6 in a fall from a Vancouver General Hospital window.

Dr. Dennis Healey, acting dean of arts, said the proposals are designed to provoke criticism and discussion among faculty members whose approval is vital if the plan is to be adopted.

"Although the (present) system brings out the best in some students, for others it is a punishing ordeal that induces feelings of panic and despair; ing emphasis on the final exam- and for everyone, both students and instructor, this overwhems learning," the report said.

the rear of the throng yelled: "We're going to make the troops earn their money tonight."

Leading the night demonstration was Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Atlanta, a close associate of King. Flanking Abernathy were other ministers, some white, the others Negro.

Faced by the city's public safety director, Wilson Baker, and the police, Abernathy said: "We only want to make a peaceful protest in an orderly manner by walking to the courthouse."

"You cannot go any further under any circumstances," Baker replied. "Halt this march right here, right now!"

THEME SONG

Abernathy led his followers in prayer.

He linked arms with marchers on each side. Then they all began singing. We Shall Overcome, the theme song of their movement.

The front ranks were composed mainly of white ministers.

After the prayers and a few speeches, Baker said:

"All right. Those of you who want to go back to the church, go now. Those who choose to remain will probably remain here for a long time. The choice is yours."

THREE ARRESTED

The three men arrested were William Stanley Hoggle, 36; R. E. Kelly, 30, and Elmer Cook, 41, all of Selma.

Tensions mounted and the spreading civil rights drive—based on Negro voting power—looked on the prophecies of 1963's turbulent summer of racial demonstrations.

Selma officials backed by a large force of police officers halted the marchers here one-half block from the church where they began. After many demonstrators expressed their grievances, the throng turned back without incident.

At Montgomery, the nearly 1,000 marchers—including a few white persons—walked to the capitol. Carrying a civil rights petition for Governor Wallace, the marchers lined up and sang "freedom songs."

STUDENTS, FACULTY

The demonstrators were led by students and faculty members of the Negro Tuskegee Institute. Later they were joined by James Forman, executive secretary of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee. A few clergymen who participated in the Selma march Tuesday also joined them.

They sat on the street. But after a few minutes, the placard-waving demonstrators got up.

City policemen stood quietly along the streets. State troopers ringed the capital itself.

The petition for the governor called for better voter-registration procedures and said there had been flagrant denial of rights to Negroes.

In his office, Wallace told reporters:

"I have no ideas about what should be done or not be done about the group outside. It's a city matter as to whether they should be dispersed."

NUKES SOON

The city commission issued a permit for the march.

In Selma, the 500 demonstrators moved only one-half block from a chapel. They were intending to reach the courthouse before they were halted.

In their ranks were six Roman Catholic nuns, a priest and many white clergymen.

Others in the massed ranks of marchers began expressing their grievances. One of them, Rev. Richard Leonard of New York, deplored the fact that hundreds of policemen were needed to handle a "non-violent group."

When the exchanges ended, the demonstrators slowly moved away. Some Negro youths, however, made a dash for the courthouse.

BLOCKED BY TROOPERS

Several hundred tried to run down the opposite end of the wide street in a Negro housing project. Troopers arrived to block the demonstration.

The ban on demonstrations in Selma followed the street attack on the three white ministers Tuesday night. The clergymen had taken part in an abortive highway march led by King earlier that day.

The U.S. justice department, carrying out a pledge of President Johnson, filed suit before a federal judge in Montgomery Wednesday for an order barring state or police interference with demonstrations.

The government joined in a suit filed Monday by lawyers for the civil rights leaders.

Massive Profit Forecast

A B.C. interior silver mine will show a net profit of $1,000,000 a year, its managing director claimed in Victoria Wednesday.

The prediction was made by Andrew Robertson, a Victoria-born mining engineer, at a Union Club press conference.

He said the Horn Silver Mine, 12 miles south of Keremeos, will be in full production within a year. It is owned by Utica Mines Ltd., of which Mr. Robertson is managing director.

$700,000 RAISED

Mr. Robertson and Toronto financier Morris Black disclosed that $700,000 has been raised to cover the cost of bringing the mine into production.

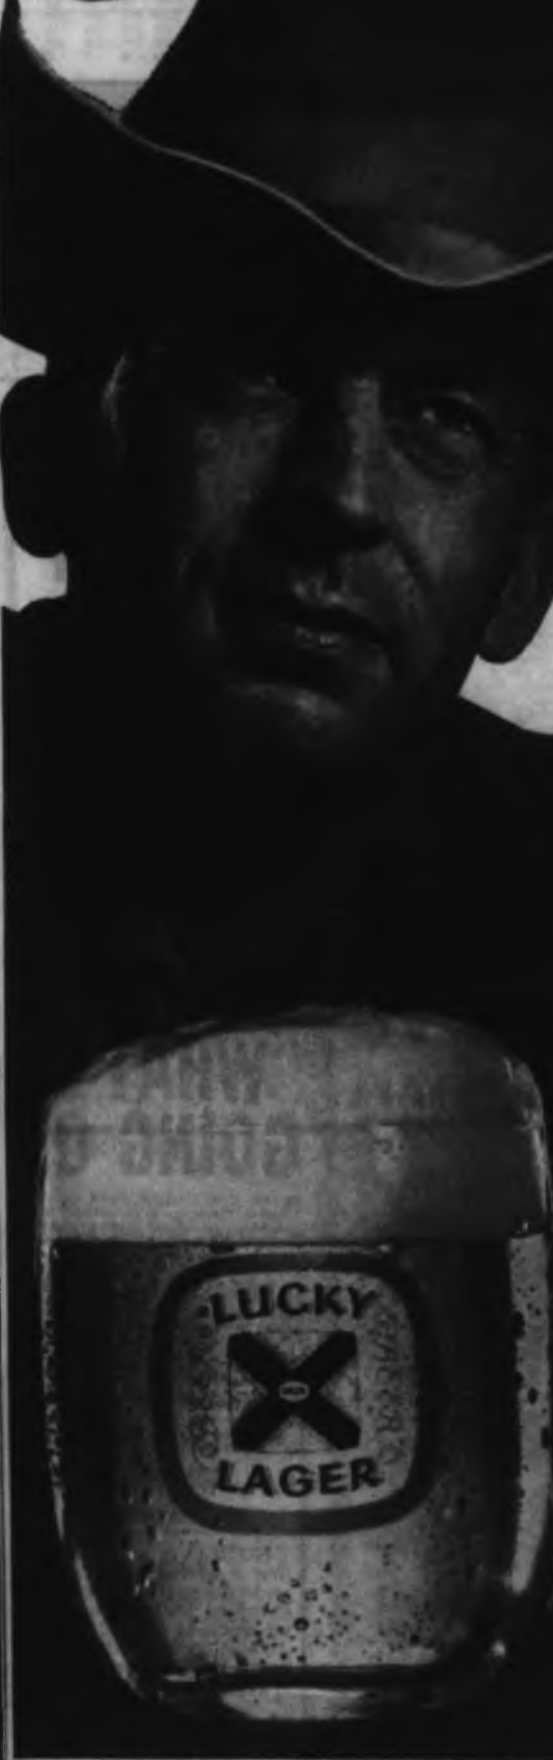

The mine was taken over last year by Utica after it had sat idle since 1929, Mr. Robertson said.

Utica also has mining sites near Endako and Merritt, B.C., and Timmins, Ont., as well as holding 43 claims adjacent to the Horn Silver Mine property.

Canadian Stays Silent About U.S. Bomb Plot

MONTREAL (CP) — Michelle Saunier, 31, refused to give evidence Wednesday at a preliminary hearing into charges against her and three young men involving a plot to bomb U.S. national monuments.

Miss Saunier, a psychology professor at a Montreal teachers college, at first refused to be sworn in on the grounds it might "incriminate" her position in regard to an indictment against her in the U.S. in the same case. She is wanted in New York on a charge of conspiring to damage federal property.

ORDERED AWAY

Later, however she relented, and was sworn in but refused to answer the first question put to her, and the judge ordered her from the stand.

Appearing in preliminary hearing with her are Jean Giroux, 20, a post office worker; Raymond Sabourin, 20, an office clerk, and Gilles Legault, 31, a salesman. They all face various charges, ranging from conspiracy to possession of explosives, in connection with the recently exposed terrorist plot to blow up national monuments in New York, Washington and Philadelphia.

AWAITING TRIAL

Three Negroes and Michelle Saunier, a former Montreal television personality, are awaiting trial in New York. Their arrest exposed the plot.

Miss Saunier was the first witness called as the court decided to proceed with Sabourin's hearing first.

Earlier, her lawyer, Gilles Duguey, had sought unsuccessfully to have the hearing postponed to next Tuesday because the defence required more time to obtain additional documents.

ADDRESS GIVEN

After Miss Saunier agreed to be sworn in she was asked by the Crown:

"On Jan. 30 did you live at 5568 Decelles Street?"

She refused to answer, and the judge ordered her to step down without taking any further action.

Viet Peace Bid Alive Despite U.S. Frost

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN Secretary-General U Thant made known Wednesday he is going ahead with his efforts to achieve peace in Viet Nam through negotiations despite a cool reaction from the United States.

The U.S. state department had told him it appreciated his suggestion, but was still awaiting necessary indications that North Viet Nam is ready to stop aggression against South Viet Nam.

Capitalism Safe For Time Being?

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Communist camp has put off plans to overtake capitalism because of a slowdown in economic growth and "difficulties and contradictions" in Comecon's integration plans, according to a foreign affairs publication here. Comecon is the Eastern-bloc version of the Common Market.

The magazine admits that while the growth rates of the capitalist world have accelerated in recent years, those of most members of Comecon had slowed down.

TARGETS POSTPONED
The magazine, International Affairs, says Comecon planners have been forced to postpone targets for their program of "peaceful economic competition with capitalism."

The article, written by two Soviet economists, blames the setbacks on backward agriculture, planning errors, raw material shortages and poor co-operation among the group's eight active members.

RELUCTANCE CITED

It did not mention Soviet economic shortcomings, nor those of Romania, which has shown itself reluctant to go ahead with Comecon integration at the pace or in the directions laid down by other members.

Tuition Fee Status Blasted in House

Opposition members in the legislature Wednesday attacked the government for forcing B.C. universities to raise their tuition fees by cutting their operating budgets.

John Squire (NDP-Alberni) said it was a disgrace that university budgets are dealt with by the cabinet behind closed doors.

"The public doesn't know what

Tobacco Ads Taboo?

Education Minister Leslie Peterson told the legislature Wednesday he thought it "an excellent idea" to remove cigarette ads from B.C. Hydro buses.

But he added that the decision to do so remains with Hydro directors.

Dr. Patrick McGeer (L-Point Grey) earlier told the House that there isn't a single Hydro bus that isn't loaded with cigarette ads.

In view of this, he said, Premier Bennett's recent attack on the CBC for carrying cigarette ads on television means the premier "talks virtue out of one side of his mouth while a cigarette dangles from the other."

HARM TO STUDENTS

It would do more harm to students who must strap-bang on publicly-owned buses for 45 minutes twice a day to be exposed to these ads than brief TV commercials, said Dr. McGeer.

At very least, Mr. Peterson should have Hydro put up some of the anti-smoking posters used in schools on empty display panels in buses. This may counteract some of the harmful influence of cigarette advertising, he said.

REMOVE THE ADS

J. Donald Smith (SC-Victoria) said he was sure the premier would bring the matter to the attention of Hydro directors and that action would be taken shortly to remove the cigarette ads from buses.

Mr. Peterson said his department was trying hard to acquaint students with the health dangers of smoking. Specially prepared lessons and printed materials have been circulated to schools.

Students are to be selected from four B.C. schools to attend a federally-sponsored conference on smoking in Ottawa in May. Schools selected by drawing names from a hat include those in Lake Cowichan, Ferale, New Westminster and Prince George.

Tracks Spur Trapper Hunt

VANCOUVER (CP)—Search and rescue units from the RCMP are continuing their search for trapper Herbert Hall near Bella Bella.

The discovery of unusual tracks—perhaps left by a limping man—spurred the renewed search for Hall, reported overseas Feb. 25.

Government Buys Lots In Precinct

The government is purchasing six lots to expand the legislative precinct, Public Works Minister Chant said Wednesday.

Five of the lots are on Superior Street and the sixth on Michigan Street.

The minister said the properties will probably be paved to serve as civil service parking lots, partially replacing the lots to be used in construction of the new provincial museum and archives building.

He said it was unfair that dedicated ministers should not be allowed to "bring the Christian attitude to bear" upon school board business while Communists are allowed to hold the office.

The legislature voted Mr. Peterson his $30,000 salary and office expenses totalling another $7,398 after some nine hours of debate.

NOT UP TO HOUSE

Education Minister Peterson told the House it is not the prerogative of the government or the opposition to set university fees. By statute this is the responsibility and right of the universities themselves.

"This administration has never announced whether there will or won't be an increase in tuition fees," the minister said.

Opposition leader Robert Strachan charged the government with determining fee raises by its actions in cutting university budgets.

CEREMONIES FOR FLAG

The government will distribute Canada's new maple leaf flag to public schools throughout B.C. later this month and Education Minister Peterson told the legislature he has suggested appropriate flag-raising ceremonies be held.

Opposition leader Robert Strachan raised the matter during debate on the education department estimates. He said that regardless of personal feelings Canada had a new national flag and the significance of this fact should be brought to the attention of all students.

PETERSON 'EVASIVE'

Mr. Peterson was charged with being evasive for refusing either to support or condemn political study clubs in B.C. high schools.

Liberal leader Ray Perrault said the government should give "positive encouragement" to such clubs so that at least the graduating class in high schools throughout the province gets a chance to hear views of all political parties.

SHOULD BE ALLOWED

David Barrett (NDP-Dewdney) suggested political clubs should be allowed to flourish in provincial high schools.

He said the freedom of the country depends on informed and intelligent voters and students "should be given an opportunity to find out what's going on."

Mr. Barrett suggested a course in B.C. politics should include rules of procedure in the legislature, how an election is run and distribution of provincial constituencies.

UNFAIR TO MINISTERS

Herbert Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) made a plea for ministers to be allowed to hold office as school trustees.

Save Jobs, Union Asks

International Woodworkers of America asked Wednesday that the legislative forestry committee be given power to deal with the effects of mechanization on the forest industry in B.C.

The union, in a brief presented to the committee, said all phases of forest management and its effect on employment in the province are a matter of "bread-and-butter concern" to 34,900 IWA members.

BRANCH FRAMED

It asked for increased staff and expanded powers for the forestry branch of the department of lands and forests.

The "persistent efforts" by the branch to make sustained yield management of B.C. forests work were applauded.

The brief pointed out that technological changes in harvesting and manufacturing of timber products are reducing employment for large groups of workers.

MORE JOBS

"Our union is not opposed to this increased mechanization, but we cannot ignore the effect on the job security of the workers now employed," IWA spokesman Jack Moore said.

"We urge that technological change in the forest products industry be planned to ensure more, not less, job opportunities for the present work force," said Mr. Moore.

The brief asked Resources Minister Williston to implement a recommendation of the late Chief Justice Sloan for establishment of an advisory committee on forestry with broad community base.

Museum Expert Heading for UBC

The provincial museum's anthropology curator, Wilson Duff, has accepted a position as associate professor of anthropology at the University of British Columbia, it was learned Wednesday.

He will assume his new role July 1. No immediate successor has been named.

Reserve Exercise, Cruise Set

A training cruise and exercise has been planned this week-end for members of HMCS Malahat, Victoria's naval reserve division.

Some 80 officers and men travelling in RCN harbor craft will take part in the exercise and stay overnight at Friday Harbor on San Juan Island.

The cruise is one of several to be held during the training year.

During the winter trips were made to Bellingham, Whidbey Island and Vancouver.

"I look forward to spending more time on my research and writing on the Indians of B.C.," Mr. Duff said. "Also, having taught this year at the University of Victoria, I look forward to an academic career."

The 46-year-old curator has held his museum post since 1950. He is also chairman of the archaeological sites advisory board, president of the B.C. Museums Association and a member of the Indian advisory committee.

CARVING PROGRAM

Mr. Duff was instrumental in bringing Mungo Martin to Victoria in 1952 and has directed the Thunderbird Park totem carving program since then.

He has also directed the government's archaeological program and is founder of the published series Anthropology in B.C. In addition he has published numerous articles and books including volume one of the Indian history of B.C., entitled The Impact of the White Man.

LARGELY COMPLETE

And for the past year Mr. Duff has taken part in the planning of the new provincial museum and archives.

"Now that the planning of the new buildings is largely complete I feel that I have contributed as much as I can," the curator pointed out. "Public works is on schedule in the production of what will undoubtedly be the finest new museum in Canada."

Windfall Drill Halted But Rumors Kept On

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP)—While the shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Limited were skyrocketing on the Toronto Stock Exchange last July on rumors that a drill hole had disclosed good values, the drill on the property was not operating, a royal commission was told Wednesday.

The drill ceased operating July 5 and did not start again until July 18 because Windfall President George MacMillan had ordered that work be stopped, Edgar Bradley, president of the drilling firm, testified.

Mr. Bradley testified that the drill crew could have resumed work at any time.

Commission counsel Patrick Hart said Mr. Bradley had spread some of the rumors that made the Windfall stock rise.

The drill crew kept busy for six days building a place to keep the drill core and a place for Mr. MacMillan and his wife, Viola, to stay.

Policeman Was Right In Killing

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A veteran Windsor policeman who killed a fleeing burglar was acting in the normal line of duty, a coroner's jury decided Wednesday.

The jury heard that Const. Craig Robinson repeatedly shouted, "At Richard George Nicholas, 34, to stop and fired a warning shot before aiming at his legs. A bullet hit his heart."

Maple Leafs Snap Back To Defeat Los Angeles

Largest Portland Crowd

PORTLAND (AP) — The largest crowd ever to see a hockey game in Portland watched the Buckaroos conclude their Western Hockey League season series with San Francisco by taking a 5-3 victory Wednesday night.

The crowd of 10,806 surpassed the old regular season record of 10,654.

The victory gave Portland a six-point league lead over second-place Seattle. It was Portland's fourth consecutive victory.

LOS ANGELES—Victoria's unpredictable Maple Leafs regained an old habit of snapping back just when things look at their worst by holding off a third-period onslaught to defeat Los Angeles Blades, 3-2, in a Western Hockey League game played before 7,031 fans.

Victory, first for the Leafs in four games and only the second in seven games, ended the Blades' longest winning streak of the season and dealt the waning Los Angeles play-off hope a crushing blow.

Hardly looking like a club which on Tuesday night had handed San Francisco Seals a 4-1 win in Victoria and then climbed off their plane Wednesday evening to go directly to the arena, the Leafs took a 3-0 lead into the third period and then fought off the Los Angeles rally.

Led by a new line which had newcomer Ed Ehrenverth replacing veteran Lou Jankowski on left-wing to play alongside John Sleaver and Gordie Redahl, the Leafs struck early for two goals in the first six minutes.

Ehrenverth, a big winger who has been attending university in Edmonton, helped set up all three goals. Two were scored by Sleaver and the other by Redahl, enough to give the Victorians their first win in five games this season on Los Angeles ice.

Sleaver's second goal came on a power play late in the third period and looked at the time as if it had clinched matters. But the Blades came back strongly in the last period and it took some fine goaling by Al Miller to make the early bulge stand up.

Warren Hynes scored in the second minute of the third period and Norm Johnson made it 2-0 with more than 17 minutes left, just 16 seconds after Victoria's Danny Bellisle had settled down in the penalty box.

Miller took over from there, coming out of the third period with 15 stops and getting the pressure relieved in the late stages of the game. Los Angeles defenceman Howie Young evened up playing strength by drawing a major penalty less than a minute after Victoria's Bill Shvets had been sent off.

Result moved the Leafs within one point of the fourth-place San Francisco Seals, who are four games closer to the end of the schedule. The Blades, who with Victoria have 11 games left, trail the Leafs by six points.

FINAL PERIOD

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Dave Skrien, like his club more poised and polished each time out, paid a flying visit to Victoria Tuesday to appear with the Grey Cup and the Grey Cup film at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Victoria Kiwanis Club. It had to be a flying visit because Skrien and program-director Leo Ornest, who confessed he came along only so he could buy some Russian cake, had missed the 9 a.m. ferry. Rather than disappoint the Kiwanians, Skrien chartered an airplane and just made it on time.

Skrien talked about the B.C. Lions while host Stan Britt acted as chauffeur on the return trip to the airport. It wasn't difficult to surmise that he was pretty well content with everything except the ability of some of the Lions to make off-field news and the almost amazing comments of Johnny Easaw, who did the announcing for the Grey Cup film.

"We," Skrien said, "will start next season with almost the same club which won the Grey Cup game."

"Our biggest problem is to find replacements for By Bailey and Emery Barnes but other than that, we are pretty well set. Of course, we never stop trying to improve ourselves and if any of the eight or nine new imports we will take to training camp can make it we will be happy. That would mean only that we will be a better club."

Skrien freely discussed the possibilities which he and his coaches will have in trying to fit the right people into the right positions at the Courtenay training camp.

Seriously, however, he said, because the most likely replacement for Bailey in the defensive backfield because Horner was a Canadian with speed and good tackling ability and the Lions have Mack Burton as a proven flanker-back. But, it seemed, that there was little chance that Bill Munsey, a Grey Cup sensation on offence, will be shifted from the defence.

It could happen but only if the Lions found a really outstanding defensive back among their new recruits along with incontestable evidence that help was needed in the offence backfield.

"Sure, we know that Munsey can play on offence," Skrien said, "but he is such an outstanding defensive back that he would have to score two touchdowns a game to make up for losing him on defence. Besides, I think we are going to be just fine on offence."

He named Amos Bullock, the big halfback obtained from Dallas in a trade for wayward-tackle Bill Frank as a solid possibility to become the big halfback the Lions would like to see alongside Willie Fleming, said that Bob Swift, the rookie fullback sensation of last season, would be even better as a sophomore and was interested in the potential of Dewey Lincoln, a new recruit from Michigan State.

"And we already have Ron Morris and Lou Holland and Bill Lameter," he added.

Skrien confessed that Greg Findlay, the eager Nanaimo youngster who has been gathering experience in steadily increasing doses for two seasons, was posing a problem.

"We just can't keep him out of the starting lineup much longer," he said happily.

Findlay gets his big chance at training camp to make it as corner-linebacker, a position which best suits his size, speed and alertness. And that means that Paul Seale would become an inside-linebacker if Findlay can show he is ready for regular duty.

Another item on the training camp list is the continuing search for the good import and the Lions have so far done nothing, and Skrien thinks the Lions may have the man in Stan Napper, a big rookie from a small Kentucky college.

"We could also use a good centre but it all comes down to the fact that we are now allowed to keep only 14 imports and we can't keep everybody we'd like to have. We have to decide on the best combination of talent. That's what training camps are for, and we're going to be going to ours with that as our biggest problem."

No man to go out on a limb, Skrien was undeniably pleased with his prospects for the 1965 season.

He said that quarterback Joe Kapp would get even better, that Mike Cade arrived last season and was just about the best tackle in Canadian football and that the Lions struck it rich when circumstances forced them to bring in three late "cuts" from U.S. professional leagues last season.

"We got three good ones," he said of defences-tackle Gus Kasapis, offence-tackle Ken Sugarman and centre-linebacker Jesse Williams.

Calgary Stampede, Skrien answered almost by intuition, were the only club he thought capable of giving the Lions serious trouble in the Western Conference, but he gave more than a passing notice of Winnipeg's Blue Bombers.

"You never know how that shakeup will affect them," he said of the Stampede, referring to resignation of Bobby Dobbs as coach. "They have the talent."

Skrien agreed that Saskatchewan Roughriders could have a problem if another season should prove one too many for some of their veteran homebrews and that Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who hit the depths last season after a succession of injuries, might be a bit troublesome.

"They're a far better club than their record last season. They'll be greatly improved from the start just by having Dick Thornton and Farrell Funston back in the lineup."

But it all added up to about the same thing. There's hardly a cloud on the Skrien horizon even with the slash in the import quota. Now, if some of the Lions would just read the rest of that "Don't drive..." admonition and Easaw would only admit he was wrong and that the Lions just weren't lucky last Nov. 30, Skrien would be in the land of the midnight sun. And no Norwegian could ask more.

WEDNESDAY'S RESULTS: VICTORIA 3 at Los Angeles 2; San Francisco 3 at Portland 5.

Next games: Tomorrow—Seattle at Vancouver; VICTORIA at Los Angeles.

Hal and Rudy NHL-Bound?

Is Portland's Hal Laycoe about to make that long-expired return to the National Hockey League as a coach and is Victoria's Rudy Pilous going back for a second coaching job?

Hockey's rumor mills are always busiest at the tag end of the season, and this season is no exception.

Perhaps the solid rumor of the three which have popped up in the past few days has Laycoe moving from Portland to coach the Boston Bruins, who have been in a lengthy struggle to vacate the NHL basement.

Laycoe has long been considered NHL material as coach or manager, and many believe it has been delayed this long only because of a vendetta forced on him by Frank Selke, Sr.

Selke, the story goes, never forgave Laycoe for being the other man involved when Maurice Richard got the suspension which cost him his best chance at the NHL scoring championship he never did win.

Since then, Laycoe has enjoyed signal success in the Western Hockey League as manager and coach at New Westminster, Victoria and Portland, where his clubs have been the most successful in the WHL, both on the ice and in drawing customers.

Laycoe's return to the NHL, as Boston coach, it is reported, is definite and will be announced soon after the end of the season. And it is quite possible that the other two rumors will also become fact.

Pilous, who won a Stanley Cup with the Chicago Black Hawks and the WHL championship at Denver last season, is said to be headed for the New York Rangers to replace Red Sullivan.

The third report, and hard to discount, has it that Alf Pike will be replaced as coach of the Los Angeles Blades, who are as badly off as the Rangers and Bruins, by Gus Kyle, a former WHL coach now in the Central League.

PORTLAND (AP) — Hal Laycoe said Wednesday night "there's absolutely nothing to it" when asked about a prediction he will be the next coach of the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

"I am very happy in Portland," said Laycoe.

Wings' goalie Crosier watches puck roll by

Detroit Closer to NHL Crown

Detroit Red Wings, scurrying towards their first National Hockey League championship in eight seasons, just about disposed of Toronto Maple Leafs as challengers last night by defeating the lack-lustre Stanley Cup champions, 4-2, in Toronto.

It was the seventh straight victory for the Wings, their ninth in 10 games, and it moved them two points ahead of Chicago in arrears. And Chicago is two games closer to the end of the schedule than the Wings.

Two great veterans led the Wings again last night. Gordie Howe, only three weeks away from his 37th birthday and playing his 19th NHL season, and Norm Ullman, at 30 in his 10th season, shared the Detroit scoring.

Howe also added an assist to his 23rd and 24th goals as he boosted his total to 64 points. Ullman's goals were his 33rd and 34th of the season and they gave him 60 points, one more than Bobby Hull, and 12 behind Stan Mikita.

Howe opened the scoring in the second minute when on the ice as a penalty-killer and Ullman followed with the 2-0 goal two minutes later while the Leafs played stymied.

Ron Stewart got one back for Toronto before the first period was over but Howe came through with his second goal at 8:13 of the second period, taking the rebound from a shot by Doug Barkley and bumping goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk out of the way before depositing the puck in the then-empty net.

Red Kelly and Ullman exchanged goals later in the middle period but the Wings were never seriously threatened.

Only goals in New York came 26 seconds apart in the second period, as Neil Nevins scoring for Rangers and rookie Phil Esposito getting his 32nd on the rush from the faceoff.

Cyclist Helmets To Be Compulsory

By IAN STREET
Columnist Legislative Reporter

All motorcyclists in B.C. will have to wear safety helmets starting July 1, under new legislation introduced Wednesday night.

Anyone riding on a motorcycle, driver or passenger, would be covered by the proposed new regulation.

Safety helmets will have to be of approved design.

FUND STREAMLINED

The bill, introduced by Attorney-General Bonner in the legislature, contains 18 pages of amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act.

It streamlines operations of the Traffic Victims Indemnity Fund set up in 1961.

Child Killed By Father

HANEY (CP)—A Haney child died Tuesday after she was run over by a truck driven by her father.

Police said Georgina Foenie, 2½, was in the driveway of her home as the truck was driven out. The rear wheels passed over her chest, and she died in hospital four hours later.

The fund protects B.C. residents who are innocent victims of accidents involving hit-and-run drivers, drivers of stolen cars, unlicensed drivers or those who cannot pay damages.

The bill allows settlements to be obtained from the fund without a court judgment. Payments are to be made within seven days of filing application with the fund.

COVERAGE SAME

There is no change in the basic coverage up to the limit of $50,000.

Other changes proposed include:

- Licence registration will no longer have to be displayed in a conspicuous place in cars.

- Municipalities may assume powers to regulate permits for chauffeurs.

- Long-term licences will be issued for bona fide antique cars at a cost of $20.

- Drivers involved in accidents may now obtain names and addresses of the registered owners of any other motor vehicles involved, and of witnesses to the accident.

- Use of snow cruisers and golf carts on public highways, heretofore uncontrolled, now comes under regulations.

- Tourists from outside B.C.

will no longer have their cars impounded if they are involved in a serious accident.

- Police may pursue any lawbreaker or suspected lawbreaker on the highway without using flashing lights or sirens.

- Traffic ticket summonses may be mailed instead of served by a policeman.

- Drivers passing another vehicle on the highway must make certain there is no vehicle approaching from either direction.

- Municipalities may make bylaws to prohibit U-turns.

Police Hunt Drags On

Rivard Reward Brings No Immediate Results

MONTREAL (CP)—The search for Lucien Rivard dragged on through its eighth day Wednesday with police reporting nothing to indicate they are close to finding the elusive jailbreaker.

A police spokesman said that, while the $15,000 reward offered by the federal government might be helpful as the manhunt progresses, it produced no immediate results.

TWO ESCAPED

Rivard, a narcotics conspiracy suspect and central figure in the Dorion inquiry, has not been seen by authorities since he and fellow prisoner Andre Durocher escaped from Bordeaux jail in Montreal's north end March 2.

Since then, police have raided close to 100 suspected criminal haunts in Montreal and district without finding any trace of the fugitives. Rumors of Rivard being sighted everywhere from Saint John, N.B. to Vermont also have been checked.

WHY DELAY?

In Ottawa, New Democrat Leader Douglas said in the Commons the government owes Canadians an explanation of why it took six days to offer the reward.

There was no reply from government benches.

NO REPLY

H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West) also received no reply when he asked whether the delay was occasioned by consultations with Texas about the Americans state putting up some of the money.

In Quebec City, Attorney-General Claude Wagner said Rivard will have to be questioned before a provincial government inquiry into his jailbreak can be completed.

Money Shortage Topic For Algae Committee

A committee appointed to seek an answer to the algae problem at Langford Lake will meet Thursday to discuss the most recent development — lack of money for research.

The Metropolitan Board of Health was told Tuesday by its chairman, Reeve R. G. Lee of Central Saanich, there is little likelihood of getting federal funds to fight the problem.

Algae committee chairman Dirk Oker declined to comment on the board's findings but said they would be discussed along with a suggestion made by Esquimalt MLA Herbert Bruch at a previous meeting.

Mr. Bruch told the committee he would try to enlist provincial aid in dealing with the problem. He said he would also try to get financial aid.

Reeve Lee said Tuesday though there was little likelihood of getting federal funds the board had the good wishes of the provincial department of health.

Limit of 40 Set For Trail Ride

The annual four-day trail ride sponsored by Garden City Horsemen's Club will be limited to 40 riders this year.

Riders will start from Goldstream May 28 and reach a base camp in the Sooke Hills the first day.

The next three days will be devoted to rides in the surrounding scenic area.

In previous years up to 65 riders took part in the event but organizers felt this was too great a number. The first 40 entries will be accepted.

Information and entry forms may be obtained from chairman of the ride, Merle Rimmer, 640 Happy Valley Road.

Announcement of the 40-rider limit was made by Roy Jewell who was re-elected club president.

Oak Bay Apartment

Committee Wants Five Storeys Less

Five storeys have been chopped off a proposed apartment building in Oak Bay, and the municipality's zoning committee will recommend a bylaw be prepared outlining the height restriction.

Builder Gordon Lovitt will be asked to accept the restriction on his proposed apartment building on Beach Drive adjoining Victoria Golf Club.

HEARING WOULD BE CALLED

If he accepts, the bylaw will be prepared and a hearing will be held for public reaction.

The zoning committee also voted to recommend a by-law be changed to prohibit professional offices, including doctors and dentists, from locating in residential areas.

AERIAL MAP

The municipality's building committee is looking into the possibility of providing an aerial map of Oak Bay.

Municipal engineer G. O. White estimated the cost at $1 an acre, or about $2,000.

Lack of Pad Delays Canadian Satellite

OTTAWA (CP)—Plans to put Canada's Alouette II satellite in orbit this summer have been postponed until the fall because of "competition for launching facilities" at the Pacific missile range in California.

The defence research board said in a statement Tuesday it was informed by the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration that a rocket launching pad won't be available although the Canadian satellite will be ready on schedule.

The Canadian satellite, like its predecessor Alouette I, is to conduct ionospheric studies. The first satellite, launched in 1962, is still orbiting the earth.

Laos Ambush Kills 10 Reds

VIENTIANE (Reuters)—Government forces, using guerrilla tactics, are taking the initiative in the northeast Laotian provinces of Sam Neua, according to Laotian military sources. The sources reported a successful government ambush Tuesday which killed 10 pro-Communist Pathet Lao soldiers near Sam Neua town.

City Approached

Guarantees Asked For Three Shows

Two repertory companies and a Salt Lake City choir will occupy the stage in McPherson Playhouse during April if city council approves and is willing to make a financial guarantee in each case.

City Manager Dennis Young said that $2,000 was provided in early discussions of possible McPherson Playhouse programs, in the interest of bringing culture to the city. Profit was not a factor in the thinking at that time.

With this in mind, the Playhouse Theatre of Vancouver and the Seattle Repertory Theatre Company were approached and bookings arranged.

COMPANIES APPREHENSIVE

The companies were apprehensive about their reception here, and asked for some sort of guarantee.

In the case of the Vancouver company, booked for April 3 to 4, inclusive, the city must guarantee $3,100. Total cost to the city after programs, advertising, and including its normal rental for three nights, would be $6,525.

WOULD BE RECOVERED

This money would be recovered if the playhouse is able to book 61 per cent of the seats for three nights.

Anything taken in, over the city's costs, must be turned over to the company.

In the case of the Seattle company, conditions are the same, except that the guarantee is $3,000. This company is booked from April 5 to 10, inclusive.

BREAK-EVEN POINT

The Salt Lake Symphony Choir, scheduled for one night, April 26, asks a $1,140 guarantee. The theatre breaks even with a 64 per cent booking, and over that the take reverts to the city.

Stop the World, I Want to Get Off is the production chosen by the Vancouver company, and the Seattle group will play Twelfth Night and Ah, Wilderness.

"The commitments to the first two companies were made at a time when the stress was on getting good productions for the theatre, and possible profit was not a consideration," said Mr. Young.

MORALLY BOUND

"It would seem that we are morally bound to honor them."

With little discussion the committee decided to recommend to council that the three productions be sponsored by the city.

$90 Pensions For Widows Hit by MLAs

Government backbenchers joined opposition members Wednesday to attack workmen's compensation pensions paid to widows of workers killed in industrial accidents.

Labor Minister Peterson was urged to raise the pension to $150 a month from the current $90 at least until the report of the Royal Commission on the workmen's compensation act is received.

The minister said an interim report is not possible but he promised to deal with the recommendations as "expediently as possible" when they are received.

This means any legislation based on the recommendations from the commission could not be implemented until next session at the earliest.

ABSOLUTE MINIMUM

Bert Price (SC-2nd Vancouver-Burnaby) suggested $150 should be "the absolute minimum" pension paid to widows of men killed in industrial accidents, adding that pensions should be at least one-third of earnings.

Leo Nimsick (NDP-Cranbrook) asked Mr. Peterson to phone Royal Commissioner Mr. Justice C. W. Tysoe and ask for approval to raise the pensions.

DELAYING ACTION

Mr. Nimsick said it would appear that the commission was set up nearly three years ago to delay action on widows' pensions.

"It looks as though it was done to take the heat off the government, so that we would blame the royal commission and not the government."

Gordon Dowling (NDP-1st Burnaby) said the members are not concerned with any possible recommendations the commission may put forward.

HUMAN NEED

"We are concerned with a basic human need that must be met with groceries," he said, adding that the government should come through with an interim supply for those people needing help.

FERNIE LIBERAL HARRY MCKAY called the pension scheme a "disgrace" and said that "we don't need a royal commission to tell us what our duty is."

OMBUDSMAN

A bill to establish an ombudsman for B.C. will be introduced in the legislature Friday by Gordon Dowling (NDP-Burnaby).

He filed notice Wednesday of the act which would establish the office of a commissioner for grievances.

It provides that no public monies be expended on the office, but that the commissioner may accept gifts and bequests up to $15,000 a year to cover his salary.

The act does not give the commissioner power to review cabinet decisions or those of federal courts.

MAINTENANCE

An amendment to the Wives and Children's Maintenance Act introduced in the legislature Wednesday night will make all court orders for payment of maintenance garnishing orders as well.

EDUCATION

The legislature approved the largest single item in the budget Wednesday — $121,279,868 for education — after almost 11 hours. Debate carried on with estimates of $1,434,364 for the labor department.

Smith Asks

Uniforms For Pupils

The government would earn the blessings of thousands of mothers throughout B.C. if it introduced uniforms for students in public schools, J. Donald Smith (SC-Victoria) told the legislature Wednesday.

The proposal was greeted with cries of "1964" and "regimentation" from the opposition benches.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson told the house this isn't a matter for government policy and added that local school boards already have the authority to prescribe dress for students if they wish.

OPPOSITION EXPECTED

Mr. Smith said he expected main opposition to uniforms would come from department stores which promote the sale of girls' clothes and newspapers who carry clothes ads.

Mr. Smith suggested the government try a pilot plan for uniforms and if necessary pay a subsidy to get the selected school district started.

ECONOMIC ADVANTAGE

There would be great economic advantages to parents, he said. Uniforms would also establish "more school pride," said Mr. Smith.

He also sneaked in another plea for annual passes for pensioners on B.C. Hydro buses.

He asked Education Minister Peterson to use his influence on hydro directors to get nominally priced passes so that elderly folk can use buses to "get to places of education."

TEACHERS SALARIES

Zonal agreements on teachers salaries in B.C. will be permitted under new legislation introduced Wednesday.

Mr. Peterson tabled amendments to the Public Schools Act in the legislature.

The bills says boards of any number of school districts and teachers associations of these districts may agree to zonal negotiations for salaries and bonuses.

Lawyer's Wife Dies in South

Longtime city resident Mrs. Mabel Foot, wife of Victoria lawyer Ernest H. M. Foot, died Monday while on a visit to Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Foot was born in Carlton Place, Ont.

She is survived by her husband, at home, 2560 Vista Bay; a daughter, Mrs. Arthur J. R. (Vera Marie) Ash, of Reno, Nev., and two grandchildren, Cairne and Christine Ash.

Driver Nabs Patrolman

MISSION (CP)—A Vancouver man has charged a provincial highways department patrolman with careless driving.

Charles Robinson, 37, North Burnaby, passed Patrolman Howard Maundrell, North Vancouver, Jan. 31, near Mission City, then was followed by the patrolman and charged with speeding.

An attorney general's department spokesman says it is not the job of a patrolman to flag down speeders in the Mission area.

Oak Bay Question

Private Parking Public Matter?

An Oak Bay councillor has questioned the principle involved in using public funds to finance parking area to benefit a private shopping centre development.

"The homeowner in Oak Bay is being asked to subsidize parking for merchants," commented Coun. J. D. Watts. "What precedent are we establishing?"

Coun. Watts is chairman of the streets and traffic section of council's "B" committee, which Wednesday discussed a revised plan to acquire property for additional parking near Oak Bay Village Shopping Centre on Oak Bay Avenue.

NO VOICE

Coun. Watts pointed out "in most places it is accepted that the store owner pays for his own parking," and said the scheme would not be included in a capital works referendum, so the people would not have a vote.

Engineer G. O. White said the prime object is to get cars off the streets and into proper parking areas.

The committee asked the engineer to draw plans for a small development, with an indication of future development.

DROPS APPROVED

The same committee will recommend to council that a request from the Salvation Army for drop-booth locations be granted.

"We have seen in the press since our last meeting that there is competition among welfare agencies, and I think we should grant the Army's request to avoid any discrimination," said Coun. Watts.

Earthquake Expectations Call for Special Design

Victoria is in a major earthquake zone and this should be taken into consideration when planning buildings, W. G. Milne told the Royal Astronomical Society Wednesday.

Geophysicist at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich, he said earthquakes in this zone sometimes register over seven on the Richter scale. The 1964 Alaskan earthquake which killed 66 people, was of magnitude 8.4 on the scale, and that in 1906 in San Francisco, 8.25.

Earthquakes run from one magnitude to 8.5, Mr. Milne said.

"We can expect to have one earthquake of magnitude seven every two years."

"In eastern Canada and north-eastern United States, they can expect one every 15 years," he said.

"I hope structural engineers realize that there is a problem and that they make allowances for it when designing buildings," he added.

Galiano to Victoria

Ferry Commandeered For Mercy Mission

A 55-year-old Galiano Island woman was reported in fairly good condition in Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital Wednesday night following a two-part mercy mission which began when police broke into her home.

She is Mrs. Daisy Hepburn, a diabetes victim who recently returned to her home from a stay in a district hospital.

Reports from Galiano said Gordie Georgeon was inspecting a work project near the home when he noticed Mrs. Hepburn lying apparently unconscious on the floor inside.

He called auxiliary policeman William Beech and the two men broke in.

Mr. Beech commandeered the ferry Queen of the Islands, which stops twice daily at Galiano, Mayne and Salt Spring islands, in that order.

The ferry bypassed Mayne on its first trip and headed directly for Ganges on Salt Spring, where the Lady Minto Hospital is located.

But there was no room at Lady Minto so Mrs. Hepburn was placed in an ambulance and brought to Victoria.

A water taxi was hired to take passengers for Mayne Island whose trip was delayed so the mercy mission could be held.

Saanich Police

Veteran Named For Probe

Retired RCMP superintendent John A. Henry will begin a probe into the Saanich police department next month, Attorney-General Bonner said Wednesday.

"An ideal appointment," commented Reeve Hugh Curtis, chairman of Saanich police commission. "This appointment will assist Saanich in assuring continued excellent police work."

The police commission unanimously approved the appointment.

SERVICE NOTED

"We would like to note Superintendent Henry's service in such centres as Duncan, Nanaimo and Burnaby, which highly recommends him for the Saanich study," said the Reeve.

The 57-year-old superintendent will begin his study on completion of a long-planned month's holiday. He retired from the force Wednesday.

Superintendent Henry has been given the widest possible terms of reference to examine "the whole of the policing services in Saanich, including in particular organization and strength of the Saanich police force."

WIDE EXPERIENCE

A veteran of 35 years' police experience, Superintendent Henry was with the criminal investigation bureau of the RCMP before being assigned to special surveys of traffic policing in each of the four western provinces. He has considerable municipal policing experience, Mr. Bonner said.

Supt. Henry joined the B.C. Police in 1930 and served throughout B.C. until 1950 when the force was absorbed by the RCMP. Since then he has served throughout Canada.

During his service with the B.C. Police he was a member of the revolver team and was considered one of the finest shots in Canada.

TO VISIT SON

Supt. Henry said he had just been asked if he would accept the appointment Wednesday and was not yet aware of what his terms of reference would be.

On his holiday he will visit his son Daryl who is training a marine parachute team in Santa Ana, Calif.

Birds of Prey

'Don't Tip Balance'

Falcons and other birds of prey are part of the balance of nature, and should be left alone, according to a man who has studied bird life for more than 40 years.

"Man is the worst predator of the lot," said photographer Ralph Fryer, 212 Robertson, commenting on a report that Central Saanich officials would investigate the killing of a pheasant by a falcon.

"Birds of prey do a lot of good, it's only natural they should hunt and kill to live," Mr. Fryer commented.

COMPLAINT

Central Saanich council received a complaint from a resident that a low-flying falcon caught and killed a pheasant.

Municipal clerk Fred Durrard was asked to investigate and report to council.

"If you wage war on birds of prey, you will have to contend with the pests they control," Mr. Fryer said.

MORE STARLINGS

Mr. Fryer said "It is only in the last 10 years that starlings have increased in number in this part of the continent. The birds of prey help to control these birds."

He said horned owls are rare now, but at one time they were a common sight, and occasionally they picked off a farmer's chickens.

"But the horned owl is also the only natural enemy of the crow. It is one of the few birds that will eat young crows, and so they help keep the balance of nature."

Mr. Fryer pointed out it is illegal to shoot birds of prey in British Columbia.

Repairs, Replacements Indicated

Crystal Garden to Lose Kinks

By A. H. MURPHY
Colonist City Hall Reporter

New administrators of the Crystal Garden took a giant step Wednesday toward smoothing and streamlining the whole operation of the recreation centre and bringing it closer to its owners—the public.

Members of the recreation and community services committee will recommend to council adoption of a report designed to iron out kinks in rates, times, ticket-handling procedure, passes and publicity.

The report was prepared by the new boss in charge of city-owned sports facilities, Jack Morgan, with the help of City Manager Dennis Young.

HOW MUCH, WHEN

When its recommendations are put into effect the public will know exactly how much it is going to have to pay and when.

Entrance fees and rates will be basically the same as they have been but people will be kept better informed.

There will be men on the door to control and direct traffic. There will be a rigid policy on passes and the internal workings of the facility will be streamlined out and made to function in conventional business channels.

TEAROOM, TOO?

It is quite likely that at the end of this year, the city will take over operation of the tearoom in the building which has been operated as a concession up to this time.

The city took over the Crystal Garden from the CPR at the beginning of this year when the railroad did not renew its lease.

Major repairs and replacements will be needed in the building.

'IMPOSSIBLE'

The over-all condition of the women's change room and surrounding area, particularly the floors, change stalls and lockers, had to be seen to be believed, Mr. Morgan told members of the committee Wednesday.

They were "impossible to maintain in hygienic condition," the report stated. The men's change area was just about as bad.

The glass roof is leaking and "it is easy to realize why the patrons complain of water dripping on them while attending dances."

LIGHTING, MOISTURE

Pool lighting is poor and there is a condensation problem on promenades and in the dance area at the south end of the building.

Hardwood dance floors are in poor condition, the report adds. In some areas butt ends of boards are protruding so badly that they could cause a dancer to stumble.

Roof trusses are in poor condition and there are plumbing troubles. Some electric panels are long past the obsolete stage. All these things should be repaired or replaced, the report says, paint used plentifully and lighting improved.

The garden was a $100,000-a-year business, Mr. Young told the committee in answer to a query.

Since the city took over at the beginning of the year revenues have increased by 18 per cent. It was hoped that this figure would grow.

Members of the committee will take a conducted tour of the building on March 22.

Lumber Workers Settle Dispute

About 50 of the 175 International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union members who work at Ogden Point docks in Victoria returned to their jobs Wednesday following a safety work stoppage of almost a day.

The men are those who work in and around chain-driven Ross lumber carrier vehicles operated by Western Lumber Carriers Co.

They refused to go back to their jobs after lunch Tuesday because the lumber carriers were operating without chain-guards, removed from the vehicles a short time ago.

They returned about noon Wednesday following a Tuesday night hearing in Vancouver held by the one-day safety stoppage.

Cormack

But Council Divided

Sidney Chairman Sees No Need To Call Election

Chairman of Sidney Village council says he sees no evidence that residents have lost confidence in the council.

But Chairman A. A. Cormack says he is ready to resign, if the rest of the council resigns with him.

He was asked about reports that the municipal affairs department does not feel the council has just cause to resign.

'I AM WILLING'

"If the council feels an election would benefit the community, I am willing," he said.

He could not say whether an election, in his opinion, would be of any benefit.

Coun. Douglas Taylor said the people have lost faith in the council, and an election should be held.

NO EVIDENCE

But Mr. Cormack said "I can see no evidence that residents have lost faith in the council."

But, said Mr. Taylor:

"We in Sidney can see the discouragement of the people, the lack of confidence in this council, much better than the municipal affairs department in Victoria."

The municipal affairs department also ruled out a suggestion that a public inquiry into irregularities in Sidney administration be held.

"I think they are probably right," commented Coun. An-

Vocational Site Uncertain

The government is having some difficulty in selecting a site for the proposed regional vocational institute promised to Greater Victoria, Education Minister Peterson said in the House Wednesday.

He was answering a question from John Tindall (SC-Saanich) who noted that government spokesmen made frequent reference to plans for the institute but there was no announcement of starting date and time of construction.

Mr. Tindall also urged the minister to consider a special centennial grant for education purposes.

Fills Bill When 'C' Overflows

'J' Is B.C.'s Blue-Plate Special for Truckers

By AL ARNABON

It finally happened this year—the motor vehicle branch ran out of numbers.

That is why some commercial vehicles have the prefix J on their new, blue 1965 licence plates instead of the old standard C prefix.

With space for only six digits including the letter prefix, something had to be done to provide more plates in the commercial class.

The J-prefix plates were issued only in Victoria, Vancouver and North Vancouver to reduce any confusion.

Licence plates are big business. Purchasers of the 16 different models on sale to B.C. residents poured the lion's share of more than $22,000,000 worth of revenue in provincial coffers in 1963.

Next highest revenue source within the figure is drivers' licences, but they are much smaller than the plate income, say officials.

This year's figures are expected to be about 70,000 plates above 1963.

Of the 657,174 vehicles registered in the province on Feb. 28, 1964, a total of 61,358 were spanking new cars and trucks.

Letter prefixes on the plates for 1965 are the same as last year except for the J series. An A means farm vehicle; F means farm tractor; T means a logging truck over 20,000 pounds gross weight; X means an industrial device such as a loader, shovel or grader; D is for dealers and N is for armed forces vehicles.

The prefix P is for trucks that cross provincial boundaries on a pro-rated basis with only one plate for use in two political subdivisions.

And then there are the motorcycles and scooters. This is a booming method of transportation, as licence planners found. In 1962 they had 4,239 motorcycles. Within 23 months the two-wheeled vehicles numbered 8,811.

With specific numbers allocated to different parts of the province, it is not too difficult to know where any particular car comes from.

Plates numbered from 1 to 60,000 or from 547,501 to 588,500 are from the Island south of the Malahat.

Nanaimo got 10,000 plates between the numbers 477,101 and 488,000. Ladysmith picked up the next block, up to 489,500. Parksville to 490,400 and Qualicum to 491,100.

Vancouver's nearly 200,000 cars will mostly carry plates numbered between 60,001 and 249,200.

Because of mail orders and a dozen other varying factors, identification isn't 100 per cent accurate but it is close.

Tasty dish combines scallops and mushrooms.

Brighten Lenten Meals With Tasty Scallops

What to serve on meatless days during Lenten season? One suggestion is Coquille Saint-Jacques, a dish that can be made with either large sea scallops or the smaller bay ones.

Young women just starting out as homemakers may not realize that although scallops are marketed as dressed meat, they actually are shellfish—mollusks with two shells, similar to oysters and clams. They are found in beds in water five to twenty fathoms deep, on a bottom composed of a shell-debris with a little mud.

In this recipe succulent scallops and mushrooms are prepared in a delicately flavored sauce made with vegetable stock, cheese and instant pasteurized powdered skim milk.

COQUILLE SAINT-JACQUES

(Makes six servings.)

One cup vegetable stock; 1/4 teaspoon salt; 1/4 teaspoon pepper; 1/4 teaspoon crushed bouquet garni; 1 1/2 pounds scallops, cut in 1-inch cubes; 1 can (10 ounces) sliced mushrooms; 1 cup instant pasteurized powdered skim milk; 1/2 cup butter; 3 tablespoons flour; 3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese; 2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs; 1/2 cup chopped parsley.

Heat stock in saucepan; stir in seasonings and scallops. Cover and cook over low heat 8 minutes. Drain scallops and measure stock. Add liquid from mushrooms (and water, if necessary) to stock to make 1 1/2 cups; stir in instant skim milk. Melt 3 tablespoons of the butter; blend in flour. Gradually add milk mixture; cook and stir until thickened and smooth. Stir in scallops, mushrooms and cheese. Pour into serving dish. Garnish with bread crumbs and parsley.

CRAB MOULD LOUIS

(Makes 6 servings.)

Three envelopes unflavoured gelatine; 2 cups re-liquified instant pasteurized powdered skim milk (according to package directions); 2 cans (16 1/2 ounces each) crab meat, boned and flaked; 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped; 1/2 cup chili sauce; 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish; 1/2 cup chopped celery; Fluffy Sauce*; radish roses; Celery; 2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced; 2 tablespoons chili sauce. Soften gelatine in 1 cup re-liquified skim milk; stir in remaining 1 cup instant skim milk. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until gelatine dissolves. Pour into bowl, chill until slightly thickened. Mix in crab meat, chopped eggs, chili sauce, horseradish and celery; fold in 2 cups fluffy sauce, given below. Turn gelatine mixture into 6-cup mould. Chill until firm. Unmould and garnish with radish roses, celery and sliced eggs. Add 2 tablespoons chili sauce to remaining fluffy sauce and serve with mould.

*To make Fluffy Sauce: Stir 1/2 cup instant pasteurized powdered skim milk into 1/2 cup ice water. Beat until soft peaks form (3 to 4 minutes). Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat until stiff peaks form (3 to 4 minutes longer). Fold in 1 cup mayonnaise and 2 tablespoons chopped green onions.

Our Man In The Kitchen

HYMAN GOLDBERG

We heard about an old, rich, but stingy, millionaire whose only heir is a young relative, a second cousin twice-removed, who watches the old gent's health with undiluted concern, because he doesn't see much point in establishing himself in a career since he is certain to inherit the old fellow's great wealth. When the young fellow was about to get married, a mutual friend asked the millionaire what kind of present he was giving the young man.

"Oh, I don't know," the old miser grumbled, "maybe a cocktail shaker, or a rare set of oyster forks, or something like that." The friend shook his head. "Really," the friend said, "you really should do something better than that. You really should do something that would make him terribly happy on his wedding day."

The old millionaire shrugged. "Well," he said, "if you think so, I will. I won't send him any oyster forks, but I'll do what'll make him happiest. I'll make believe I'm finally kicking off." The happiest way we know to kick off a party dinner is with:

PICKLED MUSHROOM CAPS ON TOAST

One pound small mushrooms; 1 cup wine vinegar; 1 cup dry white wine; 1 tablespoon salt; 1 small onion, minced; 2 cloves garlic, pressed; 2 medium bay leaves, crumbled; 5 peppercorns, crushed; 1 teaspoon dill, thyme or tarragon; 1/2 cup oil (olive or vegetable).

What you will need to prepare these lovely little mushrooms is an enameled saucepan, and then a couple of jars which you can sterilize and seal in order to keep the mushrooms refrigerated for at least one week before serving them.

Wash the mushrooms in cold water and dry them on a towel. Cut the stems off close to the caps. Don't throw the stems away, but keep them for use in other dishes, like soups.

or in making stews, or saute them, sliced, for omelette. Put the mushroom caps into the saucepan. Combine all the other ingredients thoroughly in a bowl and then pour it all over the mushrooms. Bring it to the boil, lower the heat, cover the pan and let it simmer for 10 minutes, slowly.

While this is going on, sterilize your jars. Pour the mushrooms and all into the jars, up to the very top, seal them and let the jars cool. Let them sit in the refrigerator for at least one week.

When you serve them, on toast, as an appetizer to 8 to 10 people, drain them well, but DON'T rinse them. Slices of hard boiled eggs served with this, garnished with fresh parsley, make a delicious and eye-appealing first course to any dinner. Fresh mushrooms are in season, still, and it is a good idea to pickle lots of them to store, or even freeze them, packing in a moisture-proof container after cutting off the base of the stems, without washing them.

Rose Appliques Enhance Chiffon Wedding Gown

Pink carnations, gladiolus and white stocks decorated the Church by the Lake when Rev. J. N. Clark heard marriage vows exchanged between Darleen Hope Pearson and Mr. John James Dutton.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Pearson, 3716 Tillicum Road, and Mr. and Mrs. William Dutton, 6714 Tamany Road.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon over taffeta, highlighted with a front panel of rose appliques. The fitted bodice featured sleeves ending in lily points. Her scalloped-edged illusion net veil misted from a wedding ring headpiece, centred with a pearl and sequin dora. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white stocks. Her only jewelry was a gold, heart-shaped locket, gift of the groom.

A coral satin sheath-style gown, topped with a lace overskirt was the choice of maid of honor, Miss Phyllis Wheeler. Her headpiece was a toning band of tulle and satin and she carried a bouquet of gladiolus en tone.

Best man was Mr. Ron Cambrey.

A three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. M. Pearson, centred the linen-covered head table for the reception which followed in the home of the groom's parents. Smoke-glass candelabra and arrangements of pink carnations completed table decor. The room was decorated with gladiolus and stocks. Organ music was provided by Sunday Sunderland.

Mr. Robert Barnes proposed the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip to California, the bride donned a two-piece dressmaker suit of turquoise boucle, accented by metallic turquoise accessories and toning hat. The couple will make their home in Victoria.

Eat a Cookie Then Run It Off

By PATRICIA McVORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—Eat a chocolate chip cookie and then another and on up to a dozen—and just sit.

That's one sure way to add yourself to the statistics concerning the fat of the land. But if you run—180 steps to the minute—after each cookie, you'll not put on weight.

How much energy is there in a cookie? Fifty-one calories. Running three minutes at 180 steps per minute makes the chocolate chip cookie calories crumble.

Dr. Frank Konish, of the department of food and nutrition, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, gets credit for this bit of intelligence in the battle of the bulge.

Dr. Konish, in a report in "Dietetics," Journal of the American Dietetic Association, tells of other ways of wearing off the calorie cost of eating.

Taking 50 common foods, he's figured how long it takes to wear down the calories by walking, bike riding, swimming, running, reclining. This is the new approach to dieting information he thinks is necessary to make Americans lean.

Back to the cookie. If you prefer to wear its calories off the sedentary way, reclining, it will take 39 minutes. Eat a dozen and it will take you 7.6 hours to recline the calories away.

Swimming, you wear down a cookie in five minutes; walking, in 10 minutes; bike riding, in six minutes.

Dr. Konish figures the calorie-counting booklet ought to show the various ways of wearing off the calorie-cost of eating, giving the waistline conscious ones a choice of exercise avenues.

This would familiarize the individual with the relative energy costs of common activities.

Beer, almost as popular as cookies, takes six minutes of running at the rate described to wear off one glass.

Reclining, it takes 83 minutes to pay the calorie cost of the glass of beer. Walking, you wear off the 114 calories in a glass of beer in 22 minutes.

In 14 minutes, bike riding; in 10 minutes, swimming.

Dr. Konish's tables on calorie cost of eating are based on a starting weight of 154 pounds. The fastest food to wear off is one tablespoon of cottage cheese. Run for a minutes and you're back to where you started, weightwise. It takes 21 minutes of reclining to spend the cheese calories!

It takes two minutes of running to wear down a carrot; 33 minutes of reclining to do the same thing.

All along the line, running spends the most energy. If Dr. Konish's idea catches on, it can lead to vast changes in the designs of everything from kitchens to snack bars.

Every place there is food, there ought to be a track also—for the plump ones who don't want to gain anymore.

Nothing to gain is the way they would like to look food in the face.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago I wrote and asked you why my girl friend closed her eyes when I kissed her. You told me to send a picture of myself and I have been mad at you ever since.

I am willing to forgive you if you will answer another question. I am dating a very nice girl but something about her bothers me. Every time we go out she asks me for a quarter for the telephone, or she asks, "Will you please run into the drugstore and buy me a bottle of aspirin?"

It's never much, Ann, just a petty chisel of some sort. I resent it but don't want to be a cheapskate. Should I say something or let the matter slide?—HUMAN SLOT MACHINE

Dear Human: The quarter for the ladies' room and the dime for the telephone—o.k. But I don't see why a fellow should buy a girl a bottle of aspirin unless he gave her the headache.

It's never much, Ann, just a

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to answer the charge made by a recent contributor to your column who said medical ethics are declining.

Until last year, I, too, felt that physicians were just businessmen. Then I became violently ill and was rushed to the hospital where I underwent a seven-hour operation.

Four doctors worked around the clock to save my life. There was never a word of complaint, an impatient glance, or a sharp word.

Just for the record, Ann, I'm not a lonely middle-aged woman who expects a lot of attention. I'm barely out of my teens. And my folks are middle-income people, so there was no big fat bonus here.

No one can tell me that medical ethics are sinking. I know better.—ALIVE

Dear Alive: Thank you for a lovely letter. The one that follows has a twist.

Dear Ann Landers: I was amused by the letter from the woman who complained because her physician refused to make a house call, and sent instead a "young kid who didn't appear old enough to be out of high school."

Don't look now, Madame, but your age is showing. When the doctors begin to look like high school seniors and the police officers look like sophomores it's a sign we're getting old.—ME, TOO

Dear Me, Too: Me, too!!!

Dear Ann Landers: I was relieved to read the letter from "Perplexed"—the woman whose husband wouldn't let her put his handkerchiefs in the drawer because she didn't line up the edges straight enough to suit him. I thought I was the only one in the world who was married to a nut like that.

Thirty years ago my husband yelled at me for the same thing. I could hardly believe my ears. Well, I haven't done anything right since. We are still eating at a card table because we can't agree on what kind of a dining room set to buy.

For 25 years the first thing my husband did when he came home at night was move the knickknacks from the centre of the shelf to the edge of the shelf. In the morning I'd move them back again. I finally blew up and decided to dispose of the problem by getting rid of the shelf. He wouldn't speak to me for a week because I spoiled his "game."

Well, Ann, there sure are a lot of nuts in this world and your column helped me see I was not alone. It also makes a person feel good to let off steam. Thanks. — THE OLD GREY MARE

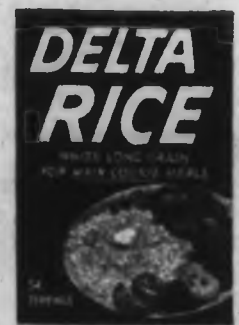

Dear Mare: I'll bet when you see your letter in print you'll feel even better, but I must say, Dearie, if it took you 25 years to figure out how to win that game, you must be a bit of a flibbert yourself.

If you plan to arrange furniture in a room where storage covers one wall, the first rule to remember is to keep furniture away from this wall. You should plan on at least three feet between the front of the wall and the nearest furniture grouping, especially if the storage units have drawers and doors. Pull the furniture into an intimated conversational grouping, and use an area rug to create a traffic hallway in front of the storage wall. The area rug should be large enough so that all the furniture fits on it. Use light-looking furniture in front of the storage wall, and consider built-in lighting so you can keep lamps to a minimum.

Conarroe-Emblem

Wedding Up-Island Of Interest Here

St. Peter's Anglican Church at Comox was the setting for a pretty wedding when Vera Gladys Emblem became the bride of Mr. Stuart Ellis Conarroe in a double ring ceremony on Saturday evening.

Rev. C. E. Lonsdale officiated at the service uniting the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Emblem of Comox, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Conarroe, Victoria.

Mrs. Roxie Ellis presided at the organ. Mrs. Don Butler sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Baskets of pink gladiolus and white chrysanthemums with white and pink carnations decorated the church. All the bride's attendants were given pearl necklaces and the flower girl a pearl bracelet.

The dark-haired bride was given in marriage by her father and chose a floor length gown of rustling white tulle designed with sweetheart neckline and long tapered sleeves. Alencon lace applique, embellished with shimmering pallies, enhanced the bodice and skirt panels. Completing the dainty effect were tiny sweetheart bows on the front of the full skirt which swept into a full train. A triple tiered crown of seed pearls and orange blossoms held her bouffant veil of nylon tulle. One tier flamed the bride's face during the ceremony. She carried a cascade of yellow cymbidium orchids.

Miss Kathy Hames was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Nancy Hutchings and Mrs. Catherine Hansford.

All three wore identically styled gowns of pink and blue delustered satin with sweetheart necklines and bell shaped skirts. Their headpieces were of pink and blue flowers with a veil. They carried cascade bouquets of white and pink gladiolus with ivy.

Gloria Burchell, the bride's cousin, was flower girl. She wore a dress of yellow nylon with lace trim and matching flowered headpiece. She carried a bouquet of yellow garnet roses.

The groom's best man was Mr. Milton Barnes from Victoria, with ushering duties shared by Mr. Doug Casey and Mr. Jim Conarroe, groom's brother.

After the ceremony a reception was held in Upper Elk's Home, Courtenay.

The bride's table was covered with crocheted tablecloth made by a close friend, Miss Hazel Shepherd of Victoria. Bowls of red rose buds were on the table.

The three tiered wedding cake made by the bride's mother and iced by Mrs. A. Lemmon, was topped with two love birds holding rings.

A sit down supper was enjoyed by 200 people.

Mr. George McQueen, master of ceremonies, called upon Mr. Ken Shattuck to propose the bridal toast.

The bride after changing to an off white dressmaker suit with turquoise hat and aqua cymbidium orchid corsage, black shoes, bag, and gloves, left with her groom on honeymoon to the USA. On their return, they will take up residence at 2316 Harriet Road, Victoria.

Play's Reach Exceeds Performers' Grasp

By BERT BINNY

The 1965 Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival, the Silver Jubilee edition, reached the halfway point at 4 p.m. Wednesday when the final curtain was drawn in the afternoon session at Craigflower School.

Wednesday's matinee provided two plays by elementary schools and one by a senior secondary, bringing the total to 15 plays.

First came Imagination by Craigflower School which was described by adjudicator Carl Hare as "very pleasant; slight but suitable both for the players and the audience."

The cast knew what they were doing and reacted to the various situations and circumstances excellently, he said. Their set was neat and attractive and their costumes neat and appropriate.

All the players were quite acceptable but Gary Plant, a Grade 3 student who played the part of Jimmy, was rather outstanding.

"A very creditable performance," said Mr. Hare. He has excellent stage presence."

TOO DIFFICULT
Langford Elementary School's Four and Twenty Blackbirds followed.

"The cast," said the adjudicator, "did their best under very trying circumstances. The play was too difficult."

They experienced troubles both with lines and with groupings. Most of the characters were very forthright both as to voice and attitude but there was a very gallant effort. Sometimes their very attention to direction led them astray.

RECURRENT ITEM
Belmont Senior Secondary School concluded the afternoon program with Still Stands the House.

House, a very recurrent item on festival programs.

"There are points of basic similarity between this play and O'Neill's Ice, presented by St. Louis College on Tuesday evening."

But the cast of Still Stands the House did not quite succeed in projecting the sense of urgency so necessary to frame and, indeed, support the whole play.

NOT SUITABLE

But the thought immediately arises that this lack of projection may not have been altogether the fault of the players. Still Stands the House is a play eminently unsuited to an elementary school audience.

They simply could not grasp its meaning or significance.

The adjudicator commended Lynne Kollmel for her sensitive portrayal of Hester Warrea.

Festival activity moved to Mount View Senior Secondary School in the evening, the program opening with Monsieur Bombel Breaks the Bank, presented by the host school.

DELIGHTFUL PLAYS

Monsieur Bombel, incidentally, is by Yves Cabrol, several of whose airy and delightful one-act plays have been seen more than once in these parts.

The adjudicator pointed out that plays of this nature and origin are as much vehicles for the flashing virtuosity of the comedians as they are for any other purpose—such as telling any story. Quick establishment of character is necessary and the Mount View production tended to be subdued at the start.

GOOD ATTEMPT

As Aristide Bombel, Kim Martin had some good moments, noted Mr. Hare, and he commended Len Bentham, in the part of Philippe, for a good attempt at the French manner.

The Happy Man, presented by Edward Milne Secondary School, is "satire shrouded in whimsy," observed the adjudicator. It is very difficult to bring off with complete success because it is a lot sharper than it appears.

Mr. Hare said the performances of the three Princesses certainly grew in theatrical stature as the play progressed.

They were nicely contrasted, he added, the ingenious approach to all the problems by Amaryllis (Ardis Roberts) being quite noticeable.

Amoret (Jean Money) and Lady Rosamund (Anke Van Ek) both displayed exceptionally pleasant speaking voices. "But," added Mr. Hare, "Lady Rosamund could have been a bit more coquettish."

It has already been noted that the program on Tuesday evening provided a diversity of theatrical forms such as drama, comedy and poetic drama.

THREE TYPES

Wednesday evening was also diversified but in a more specialized way, offering three types of comedy. There was the brilliant and piquant humor of M. Bombel, the satire of The Happy Man and, finally, the melodramatic comedy of Love Rides the Rails, presented by

Esquimalt Senior Secondary

School. This final production of the evening was non-competitive and just the last act of the very stirring melodrama was performed.

MATINEE SESSION

The Festival continues today with a matinee session at Sir James Douglas Elementary School and the second program at 8 p.m. at Oak Bay Senior Secondary.

Competing schools will be Sir James Douglas and Macaulay

Elementary schools along with North Saanich Junior-Senior Secondary in the afternoon. Oak Bay Senior Secondary provides two items in the evening in company with Central Junior Secondary.

TALK

By BRUCE LOWTHER

A good man's long fight is over. John Henry Faulk, a news broadcaster who lost a lot of work a decade ago because rightists called him a leftist, has finally and formally won a $350,000 libel award.

"I'll only need the cost. I'm a TV panelist."

Faulk was originally awarded $350,000 from the newsletter, The New York State Appeal, which is one of the several of its principals. New York state appeal courts cut the figure to $55,000 and the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled the award will stand.

TV NOTES: CFTO in Toronto has taped its first hour-long artistic special, with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. The CFTO outlet plans six such specials and has offered them to the private network as its first major dive into the artistic field.

CBS, whose ratings slip cost president Jim Aubrey his job, is said to be having trouble selling its more expensive shows. Danny Kaye's ad rate has been cut to $44,000 from $63,000 a minute. Only You, Dick Daring, the book that exposed TV planning and made Aubrey the goat, will become a Broadway musical.

Epidemic Sent Salesman Into Medicine

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — The year was 1918; the place, Saskatchewan in mid-winter.

A flu epidemic was raging across the province, and among the hundreds who died was the sister of a 19-year-old car salesman from Rouleau, Sask.

His name was Percy Moore, and he spent most of his time that winter driving an elderly family doctor from one flu victim to another.

PAID TRIBUTE

The doctor's dedication and his sister's untimely death made such a deep impression on young Percy that a few years later he entered medical school himself. In 1921, Percy Moore graduated with his MD from the University of Saskatchewan.

On Feb. 22, Dr. Percy E. Moore, now 66, was honored at a retirement dinner by more than 200 friends and colleagues in the department of national health and welfare.

They paid tribute to his 34 years of work for the government Indian and Eskimo medical services, and as head of the medical services directorate of the department since 1952.

Many thousands of Dr. Moore's friends weren't able to be there in person, but they were there in spirit.

They are the Indian and Eskimo children he helped to save from tuberculosis, polio and other diseases during an untiring campaign waged while he was medical superintendent and later director of Indian and Eskimo medical services.

HEARTY LAUGH

The doctor, a tall, grey-haired man with a hearty laugh and perceptive blue eyes, talked about his career in an interview.

"It is certainly true that our old family doctor had a big influence on me. In those days of the flu epidemic we drove day and night together—sometimes all night."

"I remember I used to stop outside people's homes quietly so as not to wake him, and let him get a couple of hours of shut-eye before he went in to see his next patient."

After completing his university training, Dr. Moore started his medical career in 1921 as a rural general practitioner. Part-time, he was medical superintendent for the Fisher Indian Reserve, 130 miles north of Winnipeg. This was a job that entailed plenty of travelling, and in those days the roads were far from good, sometimes non-existent.

STARTED TO CRY

"Once I drove a full day through muck that sometimes completely covered the wheels of my wagon to get to an expectant mother."

"I made it in time and got me a live mother and live baby."

Sterling Drop 'Unavoidable'

PARIS (Reuters)—The Gaulish newspaper La Nation says devaluation of British sterling was unavoidable.

The newspaper says the recent increase in Britain's gold and dollar reserves was not large enough to stop the sterling crisis.

32,000 Seek House Bonus

OTTAWA (CP)—More than 32,000 applications have been received for the $500 bonus on winter-built houses, Labor Minister MacEachen announced Wednesday.

Up to Feb. 26, they covered 38,204 dwelling units, up slightly from the 1964 figure.

$2,500,000,000 Needed

Resources Official Woos U.S. Investors

WASHINGTON (CP) — At least $2,500,000,000 new capital will be invested in Canada's primary resource industries in the next eight to 10 years, Deputy Minister E. A. Cote of Canada's natural resources department predicted today.

He said British Columbia alone likely will attract about $1,250,000,000.

Elderly Pair Defy Terror To Fly Ensign

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Over the modest, blue-and-white frame home of Mr. and Mrs. John Weatherall in suburban Eastview, a battered Red Ensign flies valiantly with a hole in it you could put your fist through.

The ensign got its battle scar Sunday when someone tried to burn it. A caller with a torch fled into the darkness before police could be summoned.

Believers Ready For Chaos

HUNTINGBURG, Ind. (AP)—Still expecting "great destruction to visit the earth," a Pentecostal congregation in this southwestern Indiana town has decided March 16 is not the day to enter the coal mine it has prepared.

"Everything is ready," Mrs. Chester Tedrow said Monday, "but from what has been told to us it doesn't seem that it's time for us to go into the shelter yet."

FLOOD OF LETTERS

These days he's busy answering a flood of letters from fellow workers in the health field across Canada who have heard he has left the health department. Sitting among his fine collection of Eskimo stone carvings, he sorts the good wishes and chuckles with delight.

A few of the most prized letters have come from a nurse in Cape Dorset in the Arctic, an Indian in the Big Cove, N.B., settlement, and two from former ministers of health, Conservative Waldo Mondt and Liberal Paul Martin, now minister of external affairs.

MEET AND PRAY

"There will be more than one destruction. We expect these destructions will start soon but it doesn't seem that we will be in danger March 16. We probably will just meet and pray that day."

Mrs. Tedrow says her daughter, Juanita Coomer, had the revelation of coming disaster last year. Four or five other residents of the community said they had received similar messages, including Rev. Ted Kendall, pastor of the Huntingburg Pentecostal Church.

LONG STRUGGLE

Ray Orr, of the Potato Growers Co-Operative Association, said the committee of farmers, businessmen and city council representatives face a long struggle to restore public confidence.

He said products from the area were tested after three farms were closed by the federal government. The products were found safe.

Long Fight Ahead For Good Name

GRAND FORKS (CP)—Agricultural products here are probably the safest in B.C.—but it's going to take a major educational program to make buyers realize it.

That was the view Tuesday of a committee formed to combat what they consider harmful side effects to recent publicity about pesticide contamination in the area.

COMING OF AGE

With Sally Hamilton

By SALLY HAMILTON

Question: "My mother is only 63 years old but she decided, when my father died a year ago, that she couldn't bear to live alone. So she sold her home and everything in it. Since then she has been moving in on one and another of us. (I have five brothers and sisters, all married and living in various parts of Canada.)"

"She stays until she has outlived her welcome, then moves on. She is not lazy; she bakes and helps with the children; she does the sewing and mending. But she is always looking for something to criticize."

"My wife doesn't keep house to suit her. One of my sisters, she contends, is married to a racist. When friends come in she brings up subjects that would be just as well left alone."

"If this keeps up, she will break up one or more of our marriages. And this might be exactly what she wants."

"What can we do?"

Well, if you ask me, a woman of 63 ought still to be a going concern. She needs a spot of her own — whether it's a whole house or one room. For her own good, she should not be living on the fringes of other lives no matter how near and dear.

There are those who, like our correspondent's mother, cherish the concept of a permanent holiday. She sees herself as a charming and useful member of one household after another. Her relatives might, too, if she didn't stay so long. (As the Chinese say, "After three days a fish or a visitor stinks.")

Yet, many young marrieds enjoy a warm friendship with older parents and in-laws. What makes the difference? Isn't one prime requirement independence? The person who has her own place to live is welcomed as an important person when she does visit the children.

Mrs. F., a 50-year-old widow, was miserably lonely after her husband's death. She had long-time neighbors who were good friends; and her daughter came from a nearby town for frequent visits, but it wasn't enough.

She had a nurse's training and that led her to answering an out-of-town advertisement for a nurse-housekeeper. She got the job, rented her house and moved to another city — to start a new life. That's what she thought!

But living under someone else's roof wasn't all that rosy. There were some luxuries, people were kind and the pay was good. But she was lonelier than ever. For one thing, there was nothing interesting to do in her time off.

Try as she would, she was glad to sign off in six months' time and to return to her own little nest. "I never appreciated my home so much," she says.

Now she has a part-time nursing job in a hospital, some young nurses as new friends; and her old friends are still around for visiting with on days off. She has found her "new life" right around home.

In their study of housing, the White House Conference on Aging (January 1961) made strong recommendations that older people should be helped to stay as long as possible in the familiar surrounding of their own homes.

There are many ways in which services might be provided to help keep them there: house-keeping services, meal-delivery, transportation, assistance, and simply, useful friendly visits.

Whose responsibility is it? Grandparents? The young marrieds? Yours and mine? We all stand to benefit eventually by having a part in developing such resources.

Garden Notes

Color Facing North

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRIS

Almost every mail these days brings at least one inquiry from a homeowner asking what on earth he can grow to provide some color in planters and flower beds on the north side of the house. Most of our common annual bedding plants are useless in such a position, growing tall and lanky from lack of direct sunshine, or making all leaves and no flowers.

One plant which has always given me consistently good performance in such a north-facing site is the tuberous begonia.

A lover of cool conditions, the begonia can get along quite nicely with just the bit of sunshine it receives in the early morning and late afternoon. Given plenty of reflected light from the clear sky overhead and a generous helping of leafmould in the soil, these plants will bloom their heads off from late June until October.

You can work out any color scheme you like, except blue, for begonias may be had in scarlet, crimson, yellow, white, orange, salmon, pink, rose, copper and bluish. If you wish, you can plant up all one color and mass them boldly, although personally I find more interest in a bed of mixed kinds.

If your bank balance is in a healthy condition, one way to plant up a begonia bed is to buy the plants in pots, knock them out of their pots and set them straight into the ground around the middle of May. These can be ordered from any greenhouse or garden shop by color or in mixture; well-grown and mature plants actually in bloom will cost around $1 each and you'll need enough of them to fill your problem bed or planted spacing them 16 inches apart each way.

This runs into a fair amount of money to furnish a big bed, but the first cost is the last. The bulbs are not at all difficult to store in a cool basement over the winter, and may be lifted over and over again. I have some over six years old which bloom just as profusely now as when they were youngsters.

A much less expensive way is to buy the bulbs, start them into growth indoors or under glass in late March, and plant them out when the daytime temperatures get up into the 60s, which is usually in mid-May. Run-of-the-mill bulbs—quite satisfactory for bedding purposes—can be purchased for as little as 30 cents each, with the choice and fancy kinds correspondingly higher.

Least expensive are the Belgian-grown bulbs known as double camellia-flowered, for the bloom has the general shape of a camellia blossom but with individual flowers three to five inches across, and available in a very wide range of clear colors.

A superior form is the Giant California begonia, with larger blooms, broader petals and sturdier plants, some with heavily ruffled and quilted petals like an over-size carnation, some with high centers like a rose, and some—the picotee kinds—with the petals edged in a contrasting color. These come into bloom somewhat later in the season than the Belgian bulbs.

Still fairly new and rather hard to come by are the Canadian hybrids, blooming even earlier than the small-flowered Belgians but with blooms as big as the Californians.

Hanging basket begonias have a pendulous or trailing habit of growth, rather like the old Balcony petunias so seldom seen nowadays; these are grand for draping over the front edge of a window box or planter.

The multiflora begonia makes a tiny bulb, a very dwarf and compact plant, and bears small double blooms in dense clusters, flowering so freely that you can hardly see any foliage for the mass of blooms. These are the earliest of all the begonias, but they require somewhat more sunshine for top performance.

Drama to Star Fair Ladies

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — The best acting of the year should take place on the stage of the Santa Monica civic auditorium on the night of April 5 when Audrey Hepburn presents the Oscar to the actor who gave the best performance of 1964. Rex Harrison is expected to win and it will be piquant to say the least when Audrey, Rex's co-star in My Fair Lady, and who was not among the five nominees for best actress, will be seen by millions all over the world, clutching the Oscar as she hands it to Harrison. If you look down for a second you might even have the impression that Audrey is winning the award. . . . And you can expect some pretty good acting back stage from number-one-favorite-to-win, Julie Andrews, when the two winners and the two presenters, have four sets of teeth for the photographers.

Rock Hudson is dying to do a Broadway musical. "But no one takes me seriously," he sighs. "I don't know why he would want to risk a very good Hollywood career. . . . But while we are in New York, George C. Scott has been dining and wining Tammy Grimes, while his erstwhile girl-friend, Ava Gardner is taking it easy at the Beverly Hills hotel.

James Mason is in Hollywood for two weeks, to see his children and to show the rights to his American-born Italian countess, whom he is expected to marry when his divorce from Pamela is final. Mason is the Mosty Wesley of today what with a beard for every film occasion. He has a beauty in Lord Jim. I enjoyed the movie as I have always enjoyed the book. But this Comeover story, I have always found somewhat confusing. And this is true of the film. But who cares when there is so much action and excitement.

The former Mrs. Cary Grant, Betsy Drake, and K. T. Stevens (Mrs. Hugh Marlowe) have been helping to take care of Pat Neal's children since her tragic strokes.

Calling all unknown girls. Two top producers are looking for you—Sam Spiegel, who made Bridge on the River Kwai; and Charles Feldman, who made, oh so many pussycat films, the latest being, What's New, Pussycat? The idea is to create two new young stars for Sam's next film, The Chase, and Charlie's The Group. I hate to add a dampening postscript. Most of these well publicized hunts for new talent usually end with an established talent getting the role.

Julie

The Jacques Bergerac-Douglas Leane romance is over, and for awhile when the rumors were swirling of trouble in the Ginger Rogers-Hugh Marshall romance, people were sort of hoping that maybe Ginger and Jacques could get together again. They had a marriage going, one spouse back. But if Miss Rogers means it about adopting a baby with Mr. Marshall, then they can't be having any trouble, now can they?

Laurence Harvey is in touch with Joan Collins by telephone in London where she is recovering from a bad bout with pneumonia. Which is why she could not fly with him to Hollywood.

Bond Cult Sweeps France

By ANDREW MULLIGAN
From Paris

A James Bond cult is sweeping France.

"Cinema queues for Goldfinger," said a cinema manager. "are the longest in memory."

At Galleries Lafayette a special James Bond boutique is selling trenchcoats, gold-bordered handkerchiefs, 607 cuff-links and cool, English, James Bond shirts with a personal message to the purchaser on embossed paper headed "On Her Majesty's Service."

Stark black briefcases are piled high around Sean Connery's Aston Martin and are admired by men in their late thirties. A chief buyer said: "Happily this promotion coincides with the English style, and the image of a virile man of action."

A winking neon sign outside Galleries Lafayette attracts the frustrated playboys—slick, grey-ing 30-year-olds, who provide Marcel Boussac, the department store, and Pien - Gen. de Gaulle's publisher, who are selling Bond by the million — with a rich market.

Shock waves from the Bond cult have found their way into fashion stores. Trench-coats and shiny rainwear, red plastic boots and golden lingerie are displayed on gold blocks.

Fashion pages in French papers call Bond "the Don Juan of 1965." They promote everything from silk pyjamas to sandals lacing to the knee and expect women to become "fit for James Bond."

As a golden-colored press handout puts it: "The Bond cult is purely psychological."

It may, too, be symptomatic of a changing France, a France which was once resistant to change but which is increasingly attracted to foreign influences and fashions.

Know-It-Alls Know Little

By Dr. STUART ROSENBERG

Have you ever engaged in conversation with people who are so full of arrogance that no one may contradict their erroneous statements?

Every group has at least one Mr. Know-It-All whose self-glory fills the universe, shutting even the sun out of his soul. But love is blind, they say; these chaps are such ardent courtiers of their own pride and passion, they cannot see what is plain to all others.

Here's a story—literally, one to end all stories—of one man who was so sure he knew—when he didn't.

He worked as a railway employee and one day he accidentally locked himself in a moving refrigerated car. Unable to escape, he could not attract the attention of anyone on the outside. After a long and anxious attempt to get help, he sat down in the car, resigning himself to his fate.

Slowly, he felt his body becoming numb, and as he did, he recorded the story of his approaching death in cryptic sentences which he scribbled on the car's walls.

"I'm getting colder," he wrote. "Still colder, now. Nothing to do but to wait. . . . I am slowly freezing to death. Half asleep now. I can hardly write. . . ."

And finally, "These may be my last words." And they were!

When, at last, the car was opened, he was found dead. And yet, the temperature of the car was only 54 degrees; the freezing unit had been out of order.

There was no physical reason for his death; he hadn't suffocated, because there was plenty of air in the car. Pity the poor chap: he jumped to the wrong conclusion, victim of his own illusion. He was wrong in the end, although all along he was so sure he knew.

The same terrible fate may now await all others who are so sure that they know! But they are likely to destroy their lives and the lives of others in even stranger ways.

Here's a group of them, many of whom you have surely met:

● The "don't-tell-me-anything: I know-it-all" father. He listens to no child of his—after all, he's Lord High Commissioner of the Home. Advice is not given; it is barbed out in the form of military orders.

When his children grow older, they grow away from him; he just can't understand why they seem to shun him. "Didn't I give them the very best that I had?" he wonders.

Yes, he gave them the best—but the best he had wasn't good enough. He was too sure that he knew it all—and he knew precious little, after all.

● The "can't-get-a-word-in-edgewise" wife. She's all words and opinions. Her assessment, once made, is the last word—nothing can avail against it. She refuses to be over-ruled! And what's more: if you're smart, you won't try!

She bubbles on like a bubbling brook, never permits contrary viewpoints a ghost of a chance. Her word is judicial even if it is not judicious—law, if not just. Just try over-ruled her, and you're arrived at your Waterloo.

She, of course, in any objective analysis of home-life, is always defensive, misunderstood; clearly, she should always have her way, she says, because she means so well, has everybody's interest at heart!

She knew it all along, she maintains—but she knows mighty little, after all.

● The "picked-on, maligned, scapegoat" child. Everybody pounces on him, he claims; my mistakes!

nobody gives him a chance. If only he could tell them a thing or two, he would prove to everyone how little they know. He, and only he, is well high on his cloud.

Experience, maturity, understanding, and insight aren't everything, he claims. Grown-up believe that they can lead children, just because they imagine that history is a good teacher.

Well, says he, I don't need history! I can go it alone! I need little more than myself to make my way through life.

I am sure that no one knows what I know. Parents are a bore, teachers parasites, and traditions a curse and blight. Give me my way or no way, says he! He, too, knows a little, but not much. The pity is that he is so sure that he is right!

Maturity comes hard to some people. It can never come to those who claim to be right all the time, and who can't understand why the rest of the world doesn't follow its lead and bow before its wishes.

The highest form of wisdom is reflected in the man who is honestly able to say: "I don't know. I would like to listen. I want to learn how to undo my mistakes!"

Fugitive, 17, Sentenced To Oakalla

A husky runaway from Brannan Lake School For Boys was sent to jail for up to one year Wednesday in city magistrate's court.

Garry Taylor, 17, of Vancouver, was sentenced by Magistrate William Ostler to eight months definite and four months indeterminate in the Oakalla young offenders' unit.

The teen-ager had pleaded guilty earlier to two charges of shoplifting in Victoria department stores.

"You require discipline," he was told by Magistrate Ostler.

The magistrate also said a pre-sentence report on Taylor showed that neither Brannan Lake School nor probation had helped the youth.

Douglas Weissmiller, 723 Yates, was fined $300 in city court Wednesday when he changed his plea to guilty on a charge of impaired driving. Prosecutor Peter Blissett told court police had observed Weissmiller driving on Douglas Street at an estimated 50 miles an hour at 12:45 a.m. Jan. 22.

The prosecutor said the car fishtailed through a red light at Bay and nearly went out of control.

The driver's licence was also suspended.

A $35 fine was imposed on John W. Hall, 4285 Glenford, who pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving. The charge arose from a Feb. 17 rear-end collision at a stop light on Douglas Street.

Tax Court Scheduled In Saanich

A court of revision will be held in Saanich to hear complaints against assessments under 60 local improvement by-laws.

W. J. Lindsay, municipal assessor, announced the court will sit Tuesday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m.

The court will hear any dissatisfaction with assessment provisions of by-laws passed in the last year.

Saanich usually holds a court of revision hearing once each year, to deal with all local improvement by-laws passed by council since the last court sitting.

The by-laws cover storm drainage, street lighting, sewers, road paving and tarring, street reconstructions and frontage taxes.

Complaints will only be heard by the court of revision if notice of the complaint has been made to the office of the assessor at least 48 hours prior to the time appointed for the first sitting of the court.

Queen to Meet Duchess of Windsor

Silence of 29 Years to End at Duke's Bedside

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—The Queen plans to meet the Duchess of Windsor for the first time as a result of the Duke's eye operations, thus breaking a 29-year silence between the British royal court and former American divorcee Wallis Simpson.

for whom King Edward VIII gave up his throne in 1936.

The Queen was to have visited her ailing uncle today at the London Clinic, but a third major operation on his left eye performed Wednesday made it impossible for him to receive visitors.

"This is not a casual meeting," a spokesman for Buckingham Palace said. "It has been arranged that when the Queen goes to visit the Duke, the Duchess will be with him."

The date of the meeting has not been fixed, but it is expected within the next few days.

when the 70-year-old former king's doctors decide he is well enough.

The Queen has met the Duke on several private occasions at Buckingham Palace since her accession in 1952, but a post-abdication decree barring the Duchess from any right to the title "royal highness" has prevented any official rapprochement between the Duke's wife and the royal family.

After the Windsor's marriage in June, 1937, the Duchess described the feeling of restraint as "the coldness which had set-

Street Vigil in Selma

Night Ban Ignored

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—More than 350 Negroes and white clergymen marched from a church here Wednesday night and stood in the street singing and praying after police halted the procession.

No First Aid

SELMA (UPI)—Two doctors serving with civil rights groups said Wednesday they were taken to the Dallas county courthouse by state troopers and ordered not to give first aid to people hurt in racial demonstrations.

Another Trek Across U.S.?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Negro civil rights leader James Farmer Wednesday threatened a second nationwide march on Washington unless President Johnson orders federal marshals and FBI agents to protect voting rights demonstrators in Selma.

Toronto man strips to shorts and dashes up street after taking part in protest.

Sitdown Fails

TORONTO (CP)—Police dragged 38 University of Toronto students from the American Consulate Wednesday after they entered the building to stage a sitdown demonstration to protest brutal treatment of Negroes in Selma.

It was the first night march since Alabama Governor George C. Wallace banned after-dark demonstrations following a violent outburst at nearby Marion the night of Feb. 18.

Negro leaders vowed they would stay in the street until arrested or allowed to proceed.

ALMOST 2,000 Wednesday night's march—halted after a half a block—pushed to nearly 2,000 the number of demonstrators who surged into the streets here and at Montgomery, the state capital, in the long, tense day.

Five hundred marchers were blocked by police in the daylight demonstration here. But nearly 1,000 marched in Montgomery, massing at the white-domed state capitol in a futile effort to hand the governor a civil rights petition.

POLICE STAND BY The Montgomery marchers, most of them Negroes, dwindled to only about 200 after darkness fell. But the remnant remained in the street facing the capitol. Police stood around them.

TRouble SHOOTER Civil rights trouble—shooter John Doar of the Justice Department met with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who touched off the mushrooming Negro voter drive nearly eight weeks ago.

And Leroy Collins, head of the federal community relations council, rushed back to this racial target city.

Before Wednesday night's march, one of King's lieutenants, Hosea Williams of Savannah, Ga., shouted to a cheering crowd in the church:

WE WILL STAY "If they stop us, we will stay until they arrest us, tear-gas us or let us go through!"

King was not in the procession Wednesday night.

About an hour after the demonstration started, police received an anonymous bomb threat against the nearby church. A squad of state troopers searched the red brick building. They found nothing.

Licence Losses Out?

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. may give up suspending drivers' licences for motor vehicle infractions.

The practice has been unsuccessful in keeping offending motorists off the roads, and other solutions will have to be sought, the annual convention of the B.C. Insurance Agents Association was told Wednesday.

Motor vehicles superintendent Ray Hatfield said one answer could be compulsory driver training before licences are issued. He said studies show up to 50 per cent of suspended drivers ignore their suspensions.

Coroner Glen McDonald of Vancouver said something should be done about ruling drivers off the road unless they keep their minds on what they're doing.

Nasser Warns West Germany

Stop Deal with Israel Or Lose All Arab Ties

CAIRO (AP)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser said Wednesday Egypt will recognize Communist East Germany and freeze West German funds if Bonn establishes diplomatic relations with Israel.

Nasser warned Bonn that 12 other member states of the Arab League would sever economic and diplomatic relations with West Germany if it recognizes Israel.

In Egypt itself, he said, the government would seize West German schools as a further retaliatory measure.

"West Germany is unveiled now as an imperialist power and we must punish all imperialist powers," Nasser told a mass rally.

Nasser was accompanied by Cuba's minister of industry, Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

ARAB STATES VOTED Nasser confirmed earlier reports that representatives of 13 Arab states had voted to sever economic and diplomatic relations with Bonn if it recognizes Israel, and to withdraw their ambassadors from West Germany immediately.

This vote has yet to be approved by Arab foreign ministers meeting in Cairo Sunday.

"WE WILL SEE" "Thirty per cent of West Germany's trade is with the Arab world," Nasser said. "We will see who will be pulling whose ear."

In Bonn, the development aid minister, Walter Scheel, said West Germany is not stopping all economic aid to Egypt.

ANOTHER LOAN Scheel told the Foreign Press Association that the present aid program will be carried out and the United Arab Republic will get another 100,000,000 marks ($25,000,000) in easy term loans.

The minister explained that economic retaliation against President Nasser will consist in not entering into new aid agreements with him.

Bonn fell out with Nasser over the visit to Cairo of East German President Walter Ulbricht. Bonn considers itself the only legitimate German government and tries to prevent any form of recognition for Ulbricht.

Wild night of crises worst

TENSE HOUSE BOILS

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons, for a brief spell silenced and apparently ashamed by its own actions, erupted in another wild performance late Wednesday in the pension plan debate, again pushing legislators to the brink of an election.

The earlier crisis was as tense as any moment in the Commons since the rancorous and riotous pipeline debate of 1958, from which flowed the discrediting of Louis-Rene Beaudoin as speaker of the Commons and, in the opinion of many political observers, the defeat of the former Liberal government under Louis St. Laurent.

This time, it was Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Justice Minister Favreau who squared off against each other on the question of justice department administration. While neither side withdrew an inch, they agreed the impasse had become so vital to the existence of the parliamentary institution in Canada that they would call it a draw.

IMPROPER ANSWER Mr. Diefenbaker complained that Mr. Favreau had not answered a written question properly. He asked whether the government was going to use a rule saying opposition members cannot complain about the answers they get, a government can give any information "which is obviously false."

Mr. Favreau objected, saying this was a charge he had deliberately given false information and said it raised in his mind the question of whether the former prime minister had "a minimum of decency left in him."

CHALLENGES HOUSE Speaker Alan Macnaughton asked Mr. Diefenbaker to withdraw the implication the justice minister gave the Commons false information. Mr. Diefenbaker refused, in effect challenging the government to move for his expulsion from the House.

A tense moment of silence ensued. Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), speaker of the House during the last session of the former Conservative government, said he had become disturbed at the extent to which parliamentary language had deteriorated. Members had been calling each other liars, words not admitted to parliamentary usage a year ago.

Prime Minister Pearson entered the debate to agree in principle with the former speaker and say the House should get on with its business "with less disputation." Mr. Diefenbaker noted he hadn't complained about Mr. Favreau's remark about "minimum of decency." Mr. Favreau maintained what he had said had not been false, but true.

SULLEN REGRETS The Commons then went on in an atmosphere of sullen regret at its own performance.

But before the short 3½-hour Wednesday sitting was done, another melee of shouted exchanges occurred in the pension debate.

The Conservatives supported

Moderate Dictatorship Preferred by MLA

QUEBEC (CP)—Frank Hanley, lone independent member, spoke out against democratic government Wednesday.

Speaking during debate on a bill giving teachers the qualified right to strike, he said he would prefer a moderate dictatorship with good leadership to the current "stupid" democratic system.

Viet Nam Reprisal

Buddhists Burn Catholic Homes

DA-NANG, South Viet Nam (AP)—Revived religious friction brought arson and gunfire Wednesday to Da Nang, the site of a strategic air base newly reinforced by 3,500 U.S. marines.

Buddhist youths burned the homes of four Roman Catholics in reprisal for the fatal stabbing of a Buddhist soldier by a Catholic soldier in a card game Sunday.

South Vietnamese rangers fired into the air to break up a crowd of Buddhist demonstrators shouting anti-Catholic slogans. They arrested 16 persons. No Americans were involved.

RED AGITATORS A meeting between South Vietnamese Buddhists and Catholics in of long standing in this area and speculation was strong that Communist Viet Cong agitators were trying to take advantage of it.

As the U.S. marines expanded their holdings in this area 90 miles south of the North Vietnamese border, U.S. Air Force fighter-bombers staged another raid, apparently against Communist bases and supply lines in eastern Laos territory held by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao. As in such strikes in the past, the F-105 and F-4 jets returned here without damage or official comment.

OUTPOST OVER-RAN Minor attacks were staged early Wednesday on several government installations within five miles of Saigon. In one the guerrillas over-ran an outpost assigned to protect a suburban textile plant, but did not attack the plant itself. Three of the outpost's defenders were missing.

In Saigon, a ranking U.S. military spokesman said U.S. jets have not proved spectacularly effective in attacking the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam, but "over the long pull they will be useful." The jets were unleashed Feb. 19 to supplement the work of U.S.-South Vietnamese helicopters and propeller-driven planes.

Russia Avoids Direct Clash

From UPI, AP

Authoritative diplomatic reports in London say Russia apparently is holding back promised major arms supplies to Communist North Viet Nam.

Sources said that the Kremlin was believed moving slowly on the arms aid to steer clear of any possible direct involvement in an armed collision with the United States in Southeast Asia.

The reports said there was no evidence of the substantial military aid which Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin promised to send to Hanoi following the U.S. retaliatory air strikes against military targets inside Communist North Viet Nam last month.

Nevertheless, they said, some supplies were expected to be delivered before long, although possibly not on the spectacular scale that communist sources earlier had hinted at.

Search On For Seiner Seven Men

VANCOUVER (CP)—Search and rescue officials in Vancouver said Wednesday afternoon a search was under way for the 45-foot seiner (fishboat) missing with seven men aboard in rough seas off the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The combat has not been sighted or raised by radio since 11 a.m. Wednesday.

DUNCAN — National Employment Service office manager R. S. Robinson said Wednesday he is "very optimistic" that the high level of employment in this area during the past two years will continue during the coming months. He spoke after reporting the number of registered unemployed men dropped to 662 at Feb. 28 from 1,228 Jan. 31 while the number of women rose to 196 from 190.

Totals at the same time last year were 550 men and 167 women.

The temperature rose to 61 degrees Sunday, the highest March 7 since 1940. PORT ALBERNI — Last rites will be held at 3:30 p.m. today in Stevens chapel for retired farmer Wesley Webster Cochran, 70, of Saunders Road, who died Monday in Nanaimo.

DUNCAN — Louise Charley of Kollislah was fined $15 in magistrate's court Wednesday for fishing with a net in a prohibited area of the Cowichan River. He pleaded not guilty several weeks ago but changed his plea yesterday. His 30 fish were confiscated but his net will be returned to him.

Alberni Can Aid Now

PORT ALBERNI — "The main concern should be on friendship rather than centre," says Rev. Edward Kemping, chairman of a committee set up last year to investigate possible construction of an Indian friendship centre.

He said, "a fine recreational and social centre where we could really meet Indian people would be a credit to the Alberni valley, but it would not solve the 'Indian problem'."

Mr. Kemping said the whole community can help now.

MORE NEEDED

"We appreciate the financial support from local groups," he said. "More will be needed to finish a real job."

"The important tasks of friendship take practically no money but it is much harder to complete (a building)."

The minister concluded: "Are Indian people really welcome in our neighborhood, working alongside us, sitting in our schools? You alone have the answer."

is damning labor organizations."

Mr. Cunliffe urged Chamber officials at their annual meeting Tuesday to issue again an invitation to district labor leaders to join the Chamber.

He said union membership two years ago refused to allow labor leaders to join the Chamber but, if they did join, "there would be far greater understanding between the two organizations."

AMALGAMATION

Architect Fritz Schulze came up with another major point, asking the Chamber to support amalgamation of rural areas with Nanaimo.

"Amalgamation is the answer to Nanaimo's problems from a planning point of view," he said.

ZONING REPORT

Mr. Schulze and real estate salesman Robert Fawdry and Cyril Dawkins of the community planning and civic beautification committee submitted a report on zoning conditions inside and outside city boundaries.

Details will be released near the end of the month after the executive studies the report.

FERRY SAILINGS

Outgoing president Richard Bond asked for renewed emphasis on requests for later B.C. government ferry sailings and runway lights at Cassidy airport to allow night flying.

ALBERNI — Driver Edward Wellings was admitted to West Coast General Hospital after his car went out of control on Lakeshore Road near McPherson's store. The car left the road and struck a utility pole.

He also said a survey on industrial growth in Nanaimo during the past 10 years has begun.

Mr. Bond said a builders' exchange will be set up by the Chamber in the near future, and a road to Crystal Lake from the viewpoint completed by the Chamber last summer is a possibility.

NEW DIRECTORS

Three-year directors who will take office July 1 are A. E. Fletcher, Joe Garner, D. M. Greer, T. A. Pearce, E. G. Stroyan and H. G. Warner. Taking office for a one-year term will be C. E. Croft.

Directors will meet next week to elect a new executive.

Park-Permit Delay Bad Says Bruch

COBBLE HILL — District MLA Herbert Bruch Wednesday night opposed a suggestion that the industrial permit system for B.C. parks be delayed a year so it can be explained to the public.

Mr. Bruch, speaking to 50 people in the Cobble Hill community hall, told George Bonner his idea could mean more destruction of park property by present permit holders during the year.

The Equimatt Scored also discussed provincial medicare plans during the evening, called by the Cobble Hill branch of the Old Age Pensioners' Organization.

$2,000 More For New Hall

LAKE COWICHAN — The community centre committee has approved expenditure of $2,000 for further work on the new community hall. Coun. Nelson LaFarge told the village council Tuesday.

He said the committee felt the work should be carried out before the building is used by the local Kiwanis club for a 10-day night dance May 1. Proceeds from the dance will go toward the centre.

BASEMENT FLOOR

The expenditure includes a basement floor, fire doors, stairs, grading of parking area, temporary lights and temporary water supply.

An estimated $8,000 budget from volunteer fire department chief Bob Weismiller was given to the 1965 budget committee. It includes $3,500 for renovation of the No. 1 truck, $1,500 for 1,000 feet of hose and $300 for a power saw.

Council decided to tour the district Sunday beginning at 10 a.m. to investigate works projects for the coming year.

High Runoff Due For South

The spring runoff in southern Vancouver Island still is expected to be bigger than normal, the provincial water resources branch said Wednesday in its second snow bulletin of the year.

Measurements made March 1 show record snow depths at the time of the first bulletin last month remain in the Tripp Meadows and Bear Creek sections of the Shawnigan watershed, and on Lyford mountain north of Cowichan Lake.

Further north, conditions were average except for below-normal snow packs in the Forbidden Plateau area.

Willow Point Boiling

CAMPBELL RIVER—A new complication in the controversy over a district municipality arose Wednesday with word of a meeting of all water users in the South Willow Point water district March 24.

Five of the users called the meeting by posting a notice in a local newspaper in accordance with Water Act regulations.

CLARIFICATION

They sent a letter to Willow Point water district secretary John Steven asking for clarification at the meeting of these questions:

• What is the present status of the southern area?

• How said by whom will this area be represented in "Ture"?

• What provision will be made for continued fire protection and garbage collection?

PETITION

Campbell River village and the northern half of Willow Point were formed into a municipality in December after a vote in which the southern half voted no.

The Citizens' Rights Organization, led by Kenneth Forde of Willow Point, is fighting the municipality and recently helped circulate a petition in the southern half. The result was that 80 per cent of the signers said they wanted to stay out of the municipality.

"QUITE CAPABLE" The men who called the meeting, Harold McKeg, William Widenman, Don Huntley, Jim Dennis and William Luck, say they did so because of this petition.

Spokesmen say many residents of the area feel they are "quite capable of conducting their own affairs."

NOT TOLD

An invitation was extended through Mr. Steven for a municipal affairs department official to attend the meeting.

The five men add they still have not been told why Willow Point was split in half, at Ocean Grove Road, for the December vote.

The northern half voted 26-22 in favor of the municipality while the south and Oyster Bay were lumped together and voted 157-83 against. The five say the southern half has never had a chance to vote on its own.

Touring Island Man Will Be Going Native

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — Vancouver Island hospital orderly Ray Forbes, 19, arrived on the liner Lakemba to go on an unusual trip. The young Cherry Point resident said he will spend a year touring northern Australia on horseback and live with aborigine tribes.

First Wednesday

Business Good At Nanaimo

By LYNNE WALLER

NANAIMO — City merchants say business was good Wednesday afternoon, the first Wednesday afternoon opening under the six-day shopping bylaw recently approved unanimously by city council.

The merchants added trade will likely improve as it becomes known that some of Nanaimo's stores are open all day Wednesdays.

CORNERS SLOW

All stores noted a large number of out-of-town shoppers taking advantage of the new bylaw.

Operators of small corner stores reported business was slower than usual for Wednesday, which had been one of their biggest days.

The Chamber of Commerce said 13 concerns not usually open on a Wednesday afternoon were doing business.

That figure does not include businesses open at the Terminal Park shopping centre, Harwood shopping plaza and other such centres throughout the city.

All in all, Wednesday afternoon in the business district seemed like any Tuesday or Thursday afternoon.

Shopping

Control Favored

PARKSVILLE — The Parksville Chamber of Commerce has voted in favor of a proposed set of store-closing regulations for B.C., but not without opposition.

Several members voted no and some others abstained when the Chamber approved a resolution the Courtenay-Cornox Chamber will submit to the annual convention of Island Chambers.

The resolution asks for the return of direct control of shop closing regulations to provincial authorities and an end of municipal responsibility in the field.

ONE NIGHT

It suggests Friday as the only night for late shopping, a compulsory one-day closing Monday and a ban on wide-open, unregulated shopping anywhere in B.C.

Appeals would be allowed for exemptions due to unforeseen trends, such as laundromats.

Parksville village council has given third reading to a wide-open-shopping bylaw but has delayed final approval.

Galiano Over Top

GALIANO ISLAND — This Gulf Island has again become the first area in B.C. to go over the top during the annual Red Cross campaign.

Longtime convener Mrs. Nanette New said Wednesday the 350 people in Galiano's 140 homes have gone over the $365 quota since March 1. It's not known how many years in a row Galiano has led B.C. but officials remember they lost one a decade ago, to West Vancouver.

The Duchess

Queen to Meet Duchess of Windsor

Silence of 29 Years to End at Duke's Bedside

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—The Queen plans to meet the Duchess of Windsor for the first time as a result of the Duke's eye operations, thus breaking a 29-year silence between the British royal court and former American divorcee Wallis Simpson

for whom King Edward VIII gave up his throne in 1936.

The Queen was to have visited her ailing uncle today at the London Clinic, but a third major operation on his left eye performed Wednesday made it impossible for him to receive visitors.

"This is not a casual meeting," a spokesman for Buckingham Palace said. "It has been arranged that when the Queen goes to visit the Duke, the Duchess will be with him."

The date of the meeting has not been fixed, but it is expected within the next few days when the 70-year-old former king's doctors decide he is well enough.

The Queen has met the Duke on several private occasions at Buckingham Palace since her accession in 1952, but a post-abdication decree barring the Duchess from any right to the title "royal highness" has prevented any official rapprochement between the Duke's wife and the royal family.

After the Windsor's marriage in June, 1937, the Duchess described the feeling of restraint as "the coldness which had set

Street Vigil in Selma

Night Ban Ignored

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—More than 350 Negroes and white clergymen marched from a church here Wednesday night and stood in the street singing and praying after police halted the procession.

No First Aid

SELMA (UPI)—Two doctors serving with civil rights groups said Wednesday they were taken to the Dallas county courthouse by state troopers and ordered not to give first aid to people hurt in racial demonstrations.

Another Trek Across U.S.?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Negro civil rights leader James Farmer Wednesday threatened a second nationwide march on Washington unless President Johnson orders federal marshals and FBI agents to protect voting rights demonstrators in Selma.

It was the first night march since Alabama Governor George C. Wallace banned after-dark demonstrations following a violent outburst at nearby Marion the night of Feb. 18.

Negro leaders vowed they would stay in the street until arrested or allowed to proceed. ALMOST 1,000

Wednesday night's march—halted after a half a block—swelled to nearly 2,000 the number of demonstrators who surged into the streets here and at Montgomery, the state capital, in the long, tense day.

Five hundred marchers were blocked by police in the daylight demonstration here. But nearly 1,000 marched in Montgomery, massing at the white-domed state capital in a futile effort to hand the governor a civil rights petition.

POLICE STAND BY

The Montgomery marchers, most of them Negroes, dwindled to only about 200 after darkness fell. But the remnant remained in the street facing the capitol. Police stood around them.

In between the marches, Selma police arrested three white men on charges of assaulting three out-of-state white clergymen who took part in a march here Tuesday. One of the ministers, Rev. James J. Reeb of Boston, lay near death in a Birmingham hospital.

TROUBLE SHOOTER

Civil rights trouble-shooter John Doar of the justice department met with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who touched off the mushrooming Negro voter drive nearly eight weeks ago.

And Leroy Collins, head of the federal community relations council, rushed back to this racial target city.

Before Wednesday night's march, one of King's lieutenants, Hosea Williams of Savannah, Ga., shouted to a cheering crowd in the church:

WE WILL STAY

"If they stop us, we will stay until they arrest us, tear-gas us or let us go through!"

King was not in the procession Wednesday night.

About an hour after the demonstration started, police received an anonymous bomb threat against the nearby church. A squad of state troopers searched the red brick building. They found nothing.

Nasser Warns West Germany

Stop Deal with Israel Or Lose All Arab Ties

CAIRO (AP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser said Wednesday Egypt will recognize Communist East Germany and freeze West German funds if Bonn establishes diplomatic relations with Israel.

Nasser warned Bonn that 12 other member states of the Arab League would sever economic and diplomatic relations with West Germany if it recognizes Israel.

In Egypt itself, he said, the government would seize West German schools as a further retaliatory measure.

"West Germany is unveiled now as an imperialist power and we must punish all imperialist powers," Nasser told a mass rally.

Nasser was accompanied by Cuba's minister of industry, Ernesto (Che) Guevara.

ARAB STATES VOTED

Nasser confirmed earlier reports that representatives of 13 Arab states had voted to sever economic and diplomatic relations with Bonn if it recognizes Israel, and to withdraw their ambassadors from West Germany immediately.

This vote has yet to be approved by Arab foreign ministers meeting in Cairo Sunday.

'WE WILL SEE'

"Thirty per cent of West Germany's trade is with the Arab world," Nasser said. "We will see who will be pulling whose ear."

In Bonn, the development aid minister, Walter Scheel, said West Germany is not stopping all economic aid to Egypt.

ANOTHER LOAN

Scheel told the Foreign Press Association that the present aid program will be carried out and the United Arab Republic will get another 100,000,000 marks ($25,000,000) in easy term loans.

The minister explained that economic retaliation against President Nasser will consist in not entering into new aid agreements with him.

$20,000,000 Development In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia government plans a $20,000,000 development in a two-block area downtown that possibly includes a 30-story office building, reports here indicate.

The block is bounded by Georgia, Howe, Smith and Hornby Streets. One contains the provincially-owned court house, and the other was purchased by the government for $1,200,000 last year.

HOUSE PUSHED TO BRINK

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons, for a brief spell silenced and apparently ashamed by its own actions, erupted in another wild performance Wednesday in the pension plan debate, again pushing legislators to the brink of an election.

The earlier crisis was as tense as any moment in the Commons since the raucous and riotous pipeline debate of 1956, from which flowed the discrediting of Louis-Rene Beaudoin as speaker of the Commons and, in the opinion of many political observers, the defeat of the former Liberal government under Louis St. Laurent.

The former Conservative government, said he had become disturbed at the extent to which parliamentary language had deteriorated. Members had been calling each other liars, words not admitted to parliamentary usage a year ago.

Prime Minister Pearson entered the debate to agree in principle with the former speaker and say the House should get on with its business.

"With less disruption," Mr. Diefenbaker noted he hadn't complained about Mr. Favreau's remark about "minimum of decency." Mr. Favreau maintained what he had said had not been false, but true.

The Commons then went on in an atmosphere of sullen regret at its own performance. But before the short 3½-hour Wednesday sitting was done, another melee of shouted exchanges occurred in the pension debate.

Suspensions Failing in B.C.

Licence Losses Out?

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. may give up suspending drivers' licences for motor vehicle infractions.

The practice has been unsuccessful in keeping offending motorists off the roads, and other solutions will have to be sought, the annual convention of the B.C. Insurance Agents Association was told Wednesday.

Motor vehicles superintendent Ray Hatfield said one answer could be compulsory driver training before licences are issued. He said studies show up to 50 per cent of suspended drivers ignore their suspensions.

Coroner Glen McDonald of Vancouver said something should be done about ruling drivers off the road unless they keep their minds on what they're doing.

Viet Nam Reprisal

Buddhists Burn Catholic Homes

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (AP)—Revived religious friction brought arson and gunfire Wednesday to Da Nang, the site of a strategic air base newly reinforced by 3,500 U.S. marines.

Buddhist youths burned the homes of four Roman Catholics in reprisal for the fatal stabbing of a Buddhist soldier by a Catholic soldier in a card game Sunday.

South Vietnamese rangers fired into the air to break up a crowd of Buddhist demonstrators shouting anti-Catholic slogans. They arrested 16 persons. No Americans were involved.

Ill-feeling between South Vietnamese Buddhists and Catholics is of long standing in this area and speculation was strong that Communist Viet Cong agitators were trying to take advantage of it.

As the U.S. marines expanded their holdings in this area 90 miles south of the North Vietnamese border, U.S. Air Force fighter-bombers staged another raid, apparently against Communist bases and supply lines in eastern Laos territory held by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao. As in such truces in the past, the F-100 and F-105 jets returned here without fanfare or official comment.

evidence of the substantial military aid which Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin promised to send to Hanoi following the U.S. retaliatory air strikes against military targets inside Communist North Viet Nam last month.

Nevertheless, they said game supplies were expected to be delivered before long, although possibly not on the spectacular scale that communist sources earlier had hinted at.
